Statistics Tell Tragic Story Of Welfare

By PETER BRUTON

The true, tragic story behind the ever-mounting criticism of B.C.'s welfare services lies buried in a mass of uninteresting looking government reports, statistical tables and statements published during the past few years.

Basically it's a story of wildly - mushrooming case-loads and a reduction in the number of staff handling the work.

Miss Ruby McKay, who sparked the present controversy when she resigned in protest after 16 years as B.C. superintendent of child welfare, charged that it was impossible for her staff to cope with the rapidly increasing number of families and children who needed help.

Annual reports of the social welfare department explain in detail just how heavy the load has become.

In 1954 the average case-load—the actual number of welfare cases handled by each social worker—rose from 235 to 251. At Dec. 31, 1959, the case-load had reached the staggering figure of 337.

Welfare experts say the ideal case-load is between 50 and 60.

In 1956 the department employed 556 workers — clerical, professional and technical—including 20 in the office of the superintendent of child welfare.

1,894 Children

The number of children being cared for totalled 1,894.

In 1959, the last year for which statistics are available, the number of employees had been cut by five—to 551—including 18, or two less, in the child welfare branch.

The number of children on the rolls totalled 3,337 — or double the case-load of 1956.

In her annual report for 1959, under the heading of "Strengthened Preventative Services Needed," Miss McKay wrote:

"The superintendent of child welfare and the three children's aid societies begin the new fiscal year (April 1, 1959) with responsibility for 4,815 children—343 more than have ever been in agency care in this province."

But even these figures do not give the whole picture. The situation is even worse.

In 1957, 10 of the 19 employees in the child welfare branch were trained social workers. By 1959, two years later, the number of such skilled employees had dwindled to six.

How much more serious the situation is today will not be known for at least 12 months as the department, along with most other government departments, does not release its annual report for the year ending March 31 until the legislature sits the following January.

Situation Worse

But Miss McKay's resignation points to the fact that the situation has deteriorated even further.

An examination of the annual reports and answers to questions tabled in the provincial legislature shows that when Social Credit came to power in 1952 some 70 per cent of social workers had university training, the remainder having taken a departmental "in-training" course.

Seven years later, at Dec. 31, 1959, the ratio had been completely reversed. Of the 211 social workers in the welfare department, 129, or better than 60 per cent, had no university training for the job.

And, excluding departmental

Miniature Niagara Falls was created when creek cut Sooke Road at Saseenos Sunday. Sooke water main, lower foreground, was also severed and rest of the flooded paving eventually tumbled into 15-foot hole. (Stories and pictures of weekend floods, see Pages 10, 11 and 22.)—(William A. Boucher photo.)

Parliament Hears 'Watchdog' Report

OTTAWA (CP)—The case of the RCAF officer's $34,950 house that finally cost $79,631 was put before Parliament yesterday by Auditor-General Maxwell Henderson.

It was one of 44 irregularities in government financial operations singled out by Mr. Henderson in his first annual report as Parliament's watchdog of the public purse.

GOOD ORDER

His report, tabled in the Commons together with public accounts for the 1959-60 fiscal year ended last March 31, found the books in good order on the whole. He said the public service has a long tradition of "scrupulous care and honesty of purpose" and its performance should not be condemned simply because of instances of waste or lack of judgment.

Then he proceeded to disclose what he had found, and near the top of the list was the house built for an unidentified senior RCAF officer.

APPROVED JOB

The government's treasury board approved the job at $25,000 for the house and $9,950 for utilities and landscaping. RCAF records showed the building cost $56,716 and utilities and landscaping $22,915.

The air force, he said, had figured the original estimate without counting the cost of service labor and materials. Cash outlays were within the approved limits.

FISHING FINES

Another case was that of a former magistrate who hadn't paid over some $2,400 he collected in fines for fisheries act offences from 1956 to 1958. The magistrate paid up when taken to court.

Some other instances reported by Mr. Henderson:

● Six Asian countries receiving commodity shipments as aid from Canada under the Colombo Plan had not yet reported on the creation of "counterpart funds" to match these donations — totalling $85,601,000 in the years 1954 to 1960.

● A navy deserter, absent for more than a year, was severely hurt in a car crash. The navy paid $3,500 in hospital and medical expenses before discharging him, and a further $8,000 expense was anticipated.

● The works department did $4,281 in dredging work for a private company at Liverpool, N.S., without charging the company.

● A Montreal firm—not identified—did a $245,415 job for the transport department in repairing ice-damaged landing craft at Frobisher Bay, on Baffin Island, before the treasury board's approval was sought.

● The government paid $631,000 to help Nova Scotia collieries with excess coal stockpiles.

● A contract for airport development at Riviere-du-Loup, Que., had to be boosted to $725,000 from $479,965 after a new runway layout was chosen which led over a large, deep area of muskeg.

● Two naval officers, posted from Ottawa for six weeks' duty at Centralia, Ont., spent most of the time in Ottawa and collected $539 in allowances for time spent at their Ottawa homes.

Crown Prince

Rebels Ready To Talk

PARIS (UPI)—The Algerian Moslem rebel regime announced yesterday it is ready to open negotiations with the French toward a peaceful settlement of the Algerian war. Informed French sources said President Charles de Gaulle might agree to such talks.

The rebel "provisional government" announced its offer in Tunis at the end of a week-long meeting to consider the results of the referendum in which de Gaulle won solid endorsement for his "Algerian Algeria" policy.

The rebel leaders said they were prepared to negotiate with the French government on conditions for a new referendum in which the Algerian people would decide between complete independence, or semi-independence and continued close links with France.

Firm's 'Private Paradise' Bars Vital Island Road

By ALEC MERRIMAN

Action of the Elk River Timber Company in keeping the Gold River road to the west coast of Vancouver Island barred to the general public "is making the government and the people look stupid," Comox Socred MLA Dan Campbell charged last night.

He charged that even the game warden has a difficult time getting into the area.

RIDICULOUS

"It is absolutely ridiculous when a government official can't get in, far less the public," Mr. Campbell said.

The 51-mile road from Campbell River to Muchalat Arm was built and is controlled by the Elk River Company at the eastern end and the Tahsis Company at the western end. Part of the road runs through British Columbia's Strathcona Park, but public access is barred, except by a Coach Lines bus service. Then passengers are forbidden to smoke, no matter what season it is.

The Colonist learned yesterday that when one game warden made a surprise check in the area last year, he found four company officials fishing in one of the area

'Keep Hands Off Laos'

OTTAWA (UPI)—External Affairs Minister Howard Green yesterday told the big powers to "keep their hands off" the strife-torn nation of Laos.

He said outside intervention in the current conflict would "imperil not only the sovereignty of that country but peace and stability in all of southeast Asia."

Green's warning, contained in a lengthy statement to the Commons, appeared aimed at both the United States and the Communist powers.

"This is actually the question which the big powers have to settle," Green said, referring to international agreement on the identity of the legitimate Laotian government.

"If they do not agree to some settlement, in any event if they do not keep their hands off," Green said, "it is quite impossible for other countries to bring about a settlement."

'Hitler Man to the End' SS General Tells Court

NUREMBERG (Reuters)—A former SS general told a court trying him on a charge of manslaughter Monday he is a "Hitler man right to the end."

The ex-general, Erich Von dem Bach-Zelewski, said that even today he is convinced of Hitler's innocence.

During interrogation, Bach-Zelewski claimed to have given Hermann Goering the poison which enabled him to escape the gallows in 1946.

The former Nazi Luftwaffe chief took cyanide in his cell Oct. 15, 1946, a few hours before he was to be hanged for war crimes.

Pier Burns Six Missing

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP)—A pier at the U.S. naval base here was heavily damaged by fire Monday, and the navy said six men were unaccounted for when the fire was brought under control.

At least six other men were injured.

Rebels Lose Laos Battle

VANG VIENG (AP)—A Laotian government column, supported by rocket and machine-gun fire from U.S. supplied trainer-fighter planes, fought its way today into this rebel base on the road to the royal capital of Luang Prabang.

U.S. May Buy More Planes

WASHINGTON (CP)—The United States Army is negotiating for the purchase of 34 more Canadian-made Caribou troop transport aircraft, Canadian informants said Monday.

$3,500,000,000 Interest Bill

OTTAWA (CP)—The government has borrowed money to pay the interest on the interest on the interest, W. H. McMillan (L—Welland), complained Monday night.

That's been going on for three years, ever since the 1957 conversion loan involving outstanding Victory Loan Bonds, he told the Commons in the budget debate.

Extra interest resulting from the loan amounted to some $60,000,000.

That extra high interest would have to be paid for a generation or more, mounting perhaps to $3,500,000,000 or more than twice the cost of the First World War.

Traditional Tiger Hunt for Queen Brings Growls from Animal Lovers

LONDON (CP) — The Queen's proposed tiger shoot in India—the regal recreation of bygone imperial days — appears to be generating growing growls of protest.

The six-week Asian tour by the Queen and Prince Philip, which begins Friday, includes a two-day tiger-hunting expedition at a maharajah's lodge. Despite protests, Buckingham Palace spokesman say there is as yet no indication of a cancellation.

What irritates the critics is the method of the hunt. Buffalo calves or goats are tethered to a post close to tiger-proof shelters in which the hunters wait for their prey. When the tiger appears and begins tearing up the tied animal, he is shot. When the hunt is held at night, bright lights are sometimes used to blind the tiger.

"How low can the human race sink?" asks a letter writer in the Daily Mirror.

The League Against Cruel Sports has written Prime Minister Nehru of India asking him not to allow "the wicked cruelty of this barbarous affair which would not have been tolerated in Britain."

The league says "the Queen has become so associated with cruel blood sports that it has come to be thought that the only fitting sort of entertainment for her is one in which she can kill something or see something killed."

Columnist John Deane Potter of the Sunday Dispatch urges the Queen to change her mind about the tiger shoot.

He says the sport is as exciting as "going to Regent's Park zoo, poking a rifle through the bars and killing a caged tiger."

Kingsley Martin of the weekly New Statesman says "nothing will be quite so certain to evoke satirical comments in the Indian press."

A public meeting in New Delhi yesterday protested against the tiger hunt.

The Ahimsak non-violence Party, a non-political group which opposes animal slaughter, passed a resolution urging the Queen to call it off.

Indian officials said the program will not be changed, despite the protests.

LET'S TALK

By Rudolf Flesch

Everybody has heard about great bestsellers, but not everyone knows about great "sleepers"—books published without fanfare that become known only by word of mouth.

Possibly the greatest sleeper of all time is "The Prophet" by Kahlil Gibran (Knopf) which was published in 1923 and has since sold over 1,000,000 copies.

Gibran was a Lebanese mystic, poet and artist who died in 1931 at the age of 48. He wrote many other books but none as widely loved as "The Prophet."

It's a long poem in stately Biblical prose, with a series of strangely moving pictures by Gibran himself. The prose reads somewhat like Ecclesiastes, and the pictures look a little like those by the English mystic and poet Blake.

Mounting Steadily

The first year, 37 years ago, only 1,200 copies were sold, but sales kept steadily mounting year after year and the 1,000,000-copy mark was reached last August. One bookstore in New York reports that at least one copy a day has been sold in the store over many years.

What is it that attracts so many readers to this book? I think it's the fact that it is deeply inspirational without being in the least soupy or sentimental. Gibran doesn't mind telling people great, uncompromising truths. His prophet talks about marriage, children, love, work, eating and drinking, religion and God, and what he has to say on each of these topics is far removed from the "same old stuff" you usually get elsewhere.

Marriage Spaces

For instance, he advises married couples, "Let there be spaces in your togetherness."

And he talks this way about pain and suffering: "Much of your pain is self-chosen. It is the bitter potion by which the physician within you heals your sick self. Therefore trust the physician, and drink his remedy in silence and tranquility."

He talks, with utter simplicity, about religion: "Your daily life is your temple and your religion . . . If you would know God be not a solver of riddles. Rather look about you and you shall see Him playing with your children . . . smiling in flowers, then rising and waving His hands in trees."

And he tells people, "I cannot teach you how to pray in words. God listens not to your words save when He Himself utters them through your lips."

'Protected' in Jail

American Nazi Party leader George Lincoln Rockwell was jailed "for his own protection" over the weekend in Boston as an egg-throwing crowd of 2,000 protested his group's picketing of the Jewish movie "Exodus."

Treaty Inked Today

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Diefenbaker and Justice Minister Fulton left by air for Washington Monday night to sign a Canada-U.S. treaty covering long-term co-operative development of the international waters of the Columbia River.

The signing ceremony will take place at the White House today with President Eisenhower.

The treaty will be submitted to the Commons external affairs committee here for debate before formal approval. It also requires a two-thirds vote in the U.S. Senate.

Baby Budget Over Hurdle

OTTAWA (UPI) — The federal government Monday night cleared the first hurdle in its quest for parliamentary approval of the "baby" budget by easily defeating a CCF motion of non-confidence.

After facing heavy criticism from CCF and Liberal speakers in the Commons, the Conservative majority won by 150 to 40 with the Liberals supporting the CCF.

The government still has to defeat a Liberal non-confidence motion, then obtain approval of the budget during the eight-day debate.

Earlier, a veteran Liberal MP accused Finance Minister Fleming of "loading the bond market to the advantage of the wealthy."

William McMillan said Fleming was "not a fit and proper person to be the finance minister of Canada." He accused Fleming of giving tax concessions to federal bondholders while prohibiting the provinces from adopting similar "gimmicks."

The baby was defended by Fleming's parliamentary secretary, Richard Bell, as the means of launching "the most massive attack on unemployment" and greatest stimulation of the economy ever conducted by a Canadian government.

Red Chinese Dickering For Canadian Wheat

OTTAWA (CP) — Discussions are in progress concerning the possible sale of Canadian wheat to Communist China, Agricultural Minister Hamilton said Monday.

William Benidickson (L, Kenora-Rainy River) had asked in the Commons about the current visit to Canada of two Chinese on a buying mission.

Mr. Hamilton said he could make no other statement than that "discussions are in progress."

Don't Let Claustrophobia Rule and Ruin Your Life

By JOSEPH G. MOLNER, MD

"Dear Dr. Molner: I read the question concerning claustrophobia by 'M.G.' who asked if he should take a plane trip. I suffered from the same apprehension, and faced the same quandary four years ago. I had to make a 2,000-mile trip by plane. I am an executive in a company and I couldn't back out.

"I went to a psychiatrist and his conclusion was, 'Don't think about it. Just go.' For days I was hoping something would happen to prevent my going. It didn't. I went.

"Scared? Sure I was, but I expected to be. Since then I have travelled countless times by plane.

"Subway? Scared to death.

"Later I became a good friend of the psychiatrist. He told me that he, too, had the same fear and never flew until I did.

"'M.G.'s' letter represents my anxieties to a 'T'. I still shake when I ride in an elevator, and when I drive in a crowded tunnel. But soon I am flying to Hawaii. Scared? A little, but I expect it. If I don't go, it will be worse. More and more fears will build up and be more difficult.

"I am not going to miss the good things in life because I am afraid—because my knees knock, or my heart jumps up in my mouth. I just say, 'Confidence, boy. Take it easy. Read a book till it passes.'—J.L."

LIKE ARTHRITIS

This interesting letter pretty well speaks for itself. It puts me in mind, particularly, of some arthritis sufferers. Some just say, "It hurts," and refuse to move around, and find their joints growing steadily stiffer.

Others, who say, "It hurts—but I'm going to keep moving anyway," retain use of their joints, and in some cases have very little trouble.

It's too bad that the world contains as much pain as it does, and too bad that some people acquire paralyzing fears. But these things happen, and I can think of no better answer than the letter appearing above.

As to the psychiatrist who suffered from the same trouble as his business patient, somebody once observed, "Doctors are people, too!"

"Dear Dr. Molner: My wife, in her late 40s, perspires something terrific when she relaxes. In fact her dress from neck to waist becomes wringing wet. I am concerned. The outburst of perspiration no doubt weakens her.—W.S."

There's no reason why perspiration should weaken anyone. You live in a warm climate, and that may be the answer. I can't pontificate when I don't know a lot more details than you could possibly give in a letter. But I do suggest this: Developing unexplained sweats can be a sign of some chronic infection, of which tuberculosis is only one. A chest X-ray would be a wise precaution. It may be a thyroid disorder. There are several possibilities.

"Dear Dr. Molner: What happens when I hit my arm, and don't even know it, but a big blood clot will come? It stays about 10 days.—Mrs. S.F."

"Bruise" might be a better term than blood clot. Anyway, some people have this tendency, especially women, and perhaps more often in those who are overweight. Pardon the term, I mean stout.

A deficiency in calcium is the cause that comes most readily to mind, but other nutritional deficiencies, like lack of sufficient Vitamin C, or Vitamin D, or some other element, may be involved. Such bruising also may be a sign that it's time to have tests made to see if any blood disorder exists.

Detectives' Conduct Satisfies Commission

Victoria police commission yesterday assured the city police union of its complete satisfaction in the conduct of two detectives recently under attack by lawyer David Hummel.

Mr. Hummel, in a letter published before Christmas, had charged two officers with improper conduct concerning an investigation into a charge against a client of the lawyer's.

The police union had asked the police commission for a full, formal hearing in the matter with Mr. Hummel present.

When union representatives were assured yesterday that the commission had been fully advised of the case, and was completely satisfied with the conduct of the officers in question, the union said it would be prepared to let the matter rest.

Art Treasures Come Home

WARSAW (UPI) — A shipload of historic Polish art treasures reached home Monday from Canada after 22 years of wandering.

The Polish motor ship Krynica tied up in Gdynia and began unloading 146 huge tapestries, between 300 and 500 years old, which will once again hang on the walls of the Wawel Castle in Cracow, the ancient capital of Poland.

Some of the other works of art, including crowns, helmets and jewelry from Poland's colorful and stormy past also are included in the shipment.

The Krynica also carried 30,000 food crusade packages for Poland, purchased by CARE from donations by Canadians and Americans, and other CARE commodities valued at more than $400,000.

Value of the Wawel treasures was set by the official Polish press agency PAP at tens of millions of dollars. Insurance companies of 28 countries, including Great Britain, Russia, France, Sweden, Egypt, Japan and Mexico underwrote the shipment for an undisclosed amount.

Two Youths 'Clear Slate' Admit Eight Burglaries

Victoria police cleared eight recent burglaries and a car theft from their books yesterday, as two youths pleaded guilty in city court to the entire list.

Ronald Beckley, 20, and Allan Lane, alias John Horne, 19, both of no fixed address, first admitted stealing a car in Victoria and driving it to Nanaimo, where they were picked up by RCMP.

Anxious to "clear their slate," as Det. Raymond Maitland quoted them, they admitted the series of break-ins after being questioned about one or two. Their loot totalled $21.25 and some groceries.

The two were remanded to today for sentence.

In Saanich court James Gerald MacDonald, 23, no fixed address, pleaded guilty to breaking and entering a Queenswood home Saturday.

He was caught by police after a 45-minute chase through nearby bush. A neighbor who had spotted him trying to enter a window called out, then telephoned police when MacDonald took off.

MacDonald was remanded to Jan. 19 for probation report and sentence.

In city court Eugene Carson Hunt, 18, was remanded to today for plea when charged with possession of a stolen shirt. He had been picked up during police investigation of two break-ins in Victoria West.

Downtown Parking On Agenda Today

City police commission will meet with the city's public works committee today to discuss downtown parking restrictions.

Ald. Geoffrey Edgelow, chairman of the committee, and police commissioner William Hamilton have been at loggerheads since Mr. Hamilton had police make a survey of additional parking spaces downtown.

Ald. Edgelow has called the survey "a waste of police time" and said some of the recommendations in the police report were prohibited by the Motor Vehicle Act.

How To Hold FALSE TEETH More Firmly in Place

Do your false teeth annoy and embarrass by slipping, dropping or wobbling when you eat, laugh or talk? Just sprinkle a little FASTEETH on your plates. This alkaline (non-acid) powder holds false teeth more firmly and more comfortably. No gummy, gooey, pasty taste or feeling. Does not sour. Checks "plate odor" (denture breath). Get FASTEETH today at drug counters everywhere.

Polio Test Plan Set Up

PRINCE ALBERT (CP)—The first mass oral immunization against polio attempted in Canada will be undertaken here Feb. 13-15.

Dr. Robert Woodrow, regional health officer, Monday announced this city of 22,000 was chosen by the provincial department of public health because of its size, well-organized medical and public health services, and likelihood of a good public response and high incidence of polio experienced here in 1960.

Canadian-produced vaccine developed by Dr. Albert Sabin of Cincinnati will be used in the vaccination program.

The vaccine is designed to combat three types of polio at one time.

Ike's Last Budget Sets New Record

WASHINGTON (CP)—President Eisenhower Monday proposed a peacetime record $80,900,000,000 government spending program for the next fiscal year, based on a small rise in social welfare outlays and a much bigger increase in military needs.

Cautioning against federal expenditures by "credit card," the outgoing chief executive appealed once more for a boost in postal rates and higher gasoline taxes—proposals which Congress previously rejected.

Eisenhower had estimated a $4,200,000,000 surplus for the current year but the recession and failure of Congress to approve his tax proposals now has trimmed that estimate to $100,000,000.

There's a reason for our Multivent paper...

There's a reason . . . a good, sensible reason why you get a richer taste of tobacco from a Rembrandt than from any other cigarette. The reason is simply Multivent paper . . . a thin, thin paper lightened even more by countless tiny air vents. Fresh air is allowed to cool the smoke naturally, with every puff you draw. You get less paper and a cooler smoke . . . which automatically means more real tobacco flavour. It stands to reason: If you enjoy good tobacco . . . you'll get more tobacco flavour in a Rembrandt.

Multivent's the reason for Rembrandt's cleaner flavour!

The Inauguration

THE capital city of Washington, D.C., is aflame with the kind of excitement that enveloped London eight years ago. A presidential inauguration is not precisely like a coronation but for the citizens of the neighboring republic the event is invested with a similar cachet. It is the enthronement, as it were, of the head of state.

True it is that this ceremonial takes place every four years, whereas a coronation may happen only once in several decades, but when as in the present instance a new president is to be inaugurated the event looms in particular perspective. It engenders an atmosphere of expectation and indefinable hope, a sort of sublimation of ordinary mundane life.

Thus it is that Washington is gay with bunting and a spirit of anticipation. The bleacher seats are going up along the parade route, a holiday air pervades the city, there will be concerts and balls and celebrations of various kinds. And on Friday President-elect Kennedy will take his oath amid scenes of dignity and splendor and a new era will begin for the U.S.A.

It is this latter consideration that invites a parallel with the coronation in London in 1953. Then a young, new monarch was crowned and for Britain at least the hope was high that this would herald a new and better postwar age for that land. There is equal hope across the line that the investment of the presidential accolade upon the young Senator Kennedy will symbolize the beginning of a new age for his country.

The U.S. president-elect has captured the imagination not only of his own compatriots but of others throughout the world. He may occupy the White House for only eight years at most, but the imprint of this youthful, modern, dynamic figure can be lasting. Because of the vast powers of his office he can change the course of history. Upon his resilience of mind and character, and upon the wisdom of his many grave decisions, can rest the destiny of much of mankind.

It is no wonder therefore that this year the presidential inauguration is fraught with unusual interest for Washingtonians and outsiders alike. A fresh figure has appeared on the scene, reflecting the buoyancy and vigor of the American nation, rising to meet the challenging problems of a divided and complex world. And there will be prayers as well as cheers as President Kennedy assumes the mantle of his great responsibilities.

Spurious Promise

LEFT unanswered by over-enthusiastic Liberals at their convention last week was the question which must have occurred to most people concerned with the practicalities of the welfare state: how would their medical services scheme be paid for?

The resolution calling for a national medical plan was a wordy document, but it avoided mentioning cost. Unofficially it has been suggested in Ottawa that the annual cost of such a scheme would be something in excess of $300,000,000, probably a great deal in excess. More cautious analysts of the plan maintain that that figure would not cover the cost of medical services as they are at present, and that they would be bound to increase greatly under any system of state medicine or insurance.

The Liberals propose a peculiar and what looks like a complex plan of repayment through a sort of surtax on income tax, which would absolve the low wage earner paying no income tax—without in any way limiting the use he made of the "free" service.

From those paying through income tax, it is estimated that the fund would receive approximately one-third of the total cost of providing service. Accepting the patently low estimate of $300,000,000, that leaves $200,000,000 to be found by some unstated means. What do the Liberals suggest: an increase in personal income tax? A special sales tax? A business tax? The money isn't available in the present budget, so it would have to come from somewhere.

In considering this rosy scheme of theirs it is important to recall how the British health scheme worked out. Originally expected to cost $350,000,000 a year, it actually cost nearly $1,000,000,000 in the first year and is now running to almost twice that, even though a system of charges for some services has since been introduced.

If Canadian experience proved to be much the same, as it probably would, then the cost would not be $300,000,000 a year but something a lot closer to two billion. Where is that kind of money to be found?

This is the dubious promise the Liberals have presented to the country in the desperate hope that it might get them elected. How much more confidence-inspiring is the action of Prime Minister Diefenbaker who, confronted with an undoubted public demand for some form of national medical care, has appointed a royal commission to find out first what it would cost and how it could be set up.

The Swiftsure Lightship

VICTORIA need not worry about the prospect of the Swiftsure Lightship being replaced by a pylon-type lighthouse. Although the now famous Swiftsure yacht race may be said to have taken its name from the lightship, a fixed light in the same location undoubtedly would take the same name, given to it by the Swiftsure Bank, which the light marks for the guidance of mariners.

In the more than two decades during which this race has been held—on a small scale and more or less informally at the beginning—the Swiftsure Lightship has been used as a convenient outward mark of the course. A pylon would serve the purpose just as well. And if the tower were manned—as it would almost certainly have to be—there would still be facilities for reporting the racers as they turned the mark and headed back to the finish line at Victoria.

The international race with which Victoria is now firmly identified should not be affected in any important way by a change which would relieve a ship's company of what must be a miserable existence on a shoal where heavy swells and confused seas alternate with the weather to keep the little lightship rolling and pitching.

BREEZY

Terrifying Jungle

Kennedy and The Atomic Arms Race

BY MARQUIS CHILDS

WASHINGTON — Diplomats here are seeking everywhere for clues to the foreign policy of the incoming Kennedy administration and this is particularly true of Latin-Americans, who see the combination of chaos and Communism in Cuba as a terrifying imperative for the new president.

The temporary office in the State Department of Dean Rusk, the incoming secretary of state, is besieged. The under-secretary, Chester Bowles, is also under hot pursuit.

Searching for signs and portents, some of the Latin diplomats have been reading a book just published, called "The Secretary of State," a series of essays put together under the auspices of Columbia University's American Assembly. One of the contributors is Paul H. Nitze, whom the president-elect has designated as assistant secretary of defence in charge of international affairs. Nitze was chief of the planning staff in the state department under Dean Acheson, who is also a contributor to the volume.

In his new position Nitze will have an important policy voice from the Pentagon. Latin-Americans concerned over the fate of Cuba and whether the effort to overthrow Castro will come through an invasion put on from the outside or from an internal revolt have noted particularly one passage in Nitze's essay:

"Today it would appear that the most important tool of foreign policy is prestige. Prestige is a complex concept. It has a number of elements. Like the economic tool, it is a mixture of immemorial principle and new scope.

"One component of a nation's prestige is the belief of others that the nation has the will and the capability to bring about whatever it indicates as its serious intentions. From this standpoint the brutal Soviet suppression of the Hungarian uprising contributed to the growth of Soviet prestige. The failure of the British and French to press their intervention in Suez with speed and effectiveness was a blow to England and France in this component of prestige."

A second component of prestige, according to Nitze, is the respect for American principles which have aided other peoples to self-determination and in moving into the modern world in freedom. America still leads in this second component, Nitze believes, but its assets there may be outweighed by growing losses in the power to enforce its will.

Quoting Adlai Stevenson as referring to the confrontation with the Russians as "negotiations that are vital to our survival," he suggests that the "logical corollary" of this viewpoint is that if we can't get them to agree to our viewpoint we must then accept theirs if we are to survive. Only the Bertrand Russells and the pacifists fully accept this corollary, he notes, adding, however, that this attitude has "some support in the facts of the situation" and must be dealt with by a secretary of state.

Diplomats put special stress on Nitze's words because of the current report that he will have an important role in formulating a disarmament program.

John J. McCloy, who recently retired as head of the Chase Manhattan Bank in New York and has been assigned to that task, has indicated that in the first months at least he will operate out of his New York law office. If he were to regard it as a part-time job, then others on the ground here in Washington would exercise a disproportionate influence.

Both from the pledges President-elect Kennedy made in his campaign and from the public sense that with a new administration a new beginning is possible, the question of disarmament and negotiation with the Soviets is of paramount importance. If the new administration fails to come up with bold, imaginative programs in this field, there will be a profound letdown—and American prestige—that badly overworked word—will surely suffer.

The United States today has three to four times the volume of nuclear explosive necessary to devastate the whole Communist bloc. If one bomb every three months were taken out of storage and its core of explosive converted to peaceful uses and turned over to the International Atoms for Peace agency, there would be a dramatic response of hope everywhere. And America's deterrent power would not, in fact, be lessened in the least.

It is ideas of dramatic impact that will help to put the West back in the position of trying to lead the way out of the terrifying jungle of the nuclear arms race. Whether these ideas will be forthcoming or whether those who must try to formulate them will remain frozen in the old familiar postures of the cold war is one of the riddles of the months ahead.

Thinking Aloud

". . . of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—of cabbages and kings."

By TOM TAYLOR

SOMETIMES when accidentally a piece in this space makes someone laugh a friend will say "I like you when you're being humorous." And I'm flabbergasted.

This presupposes yours truly to be a humorist, you see, which is a sad cry from reality. Indeed, I'm not too sure always what humor is, except that as a quality it is not all things to all men. A situation that might make me laugh, for instance might draw frowns from my neighbors.

As for the manufacturing of it?

It was a practicing humorist, incidentally, by name of Mark Twain, who said there was no humor in heaven, although I'd like to know what made him so certain. Perhaps he is better informed now. He it was also who averred that the true source of humor was sorrow, and that wouldn't surprise me one bit.

Sorrow at being a humorist, I mean.

No picture I ever saw of Mr. Twain showed him other than gloomy-looking, and that seems to be a characteristic of the breed. The professional whose job is to make people laugh is often a very solemn chap in private life.

No wonder, of course.

A humorist in print doesn't just turn a key in his head and thus set his funny bone in action. At least I don't think so. Sometimes he just hacks out his humor piece by piece. But by the gift of grace or trick of technique he jells it smooth for his readers.

I looked up a book, my customary tactic when stuck for further remarks, to see what the masters had to say on the subject. I raised my eyebrows at one of them, by name Keith Preston.

He says a man mustn't laugh at his own wheeze, just as a snuffbox has no right to sneeze. But he's all wrong. Half the fun in comedy business comes from the glee with which some men tell their tales.

If they are adept practitioners you laugh heartily, but by infection.

The stage comicality of the comedian can put his act over; although off-stage he might be cheerful enough but doesn't necessarily go around cracking jokes. Some famous comedians, probably, couldn't invent a joke of their own anyway.

Humor is not compounded alone of the wisecrack, which palls easily. A person can have a sad story to tell, sad to him, yet the situation may be so humorous as to make his listeners hold their sides. And to the delight of their friends even if they don't know it, some individuals are naturally droll.

Barrie, another professional although whimsy was his forte, likened a humorist to a man firing at a target; until the target tells him he doesn't know whether he's hit it or not.

That must mean a lot of bated breath.

Whimsy is humor in a soft key, that which treats something with a gentle fancy designed only to raise a smile. Yet Carlyle, albeit he was scarcely a humorist, could assess a smile as lying deeper than a laugh.

When it comes to writing mood plays its part and invariably it will out. If one is lighthearted and has a cheerful topic on which to expand then the pen communicates the mood. And if perchance he hits on a few felicitous phrases his readers, fortunately, think he has a sense of humor.

Which reminds me than another master says a man will confess to treason, murder, false teeth or a wig rather than admit a lack of this diverting quality. Maybe that's why the foregoing is fashioned.

Prepositioning

Pedants who howl that we should never use a preposition at the end of a sentence might make a note of this heading in the erudite Times of London: "A Bad Age to Live Through; but a Good Age to Learn From."

Reports from Ottawa

The Liberals passed resolutions calling for state medical care and a broad program of government scholarships and bursaries that would go far towards establishing a universal right to a college education. They gave subcommittee approval to plans for national economic planning and for state acceptance of responsibility for providing citizens with the opportunity to work, but these questions were left for final determination by the party's advisory council.

A generation ago such objectives would have been "socialism." Are they today?

Lester Pearson doesn't admit they are socialism. He favors a "mixed economy" — both private and public enterprise. He distinguishes between "state action . . necessary for the security of the individual citizen" (the welfare state) and "government intervention (as) an end in itself," which he implies is the socialist way.

I think Pearson's view and his party's new look reflect the fact that in a generation the whole orientation of the body politic has shifted leftward, so that yesterday's "socialism" is today's liberalism. The Grits, the Tories, even the Socreds are moving leftward — trying, so far as their ideological shackles allow, to adapt themselves to what they judge to be the popular demand for an ever-increasing degree of personal and social security through state paternalism.

You can read it as a sign of Liberal democracy, or of uncertainty in the top Liberal echelons, but the fact is that the Liberal Party's left helm was in response to orders from the fo'castle, not the quarterdeck.

Admittedly, as Pearson pointed out, the convention resolutions are only "a guide for party policy and (Liberal) government action." But having called this pow-wow for the stated reason of getting political advice from the rank and file, Pearson will ignore that advice at his political peril. That is why, for instance, he marshalled his tactitians to stop the convention floor drive to commit the party to work actively for the seating of Red China in the United Nations.

It is almost impossible to avoid cynical assessment of convention policies. Invariably until now, I believe, convention policies have been the result of back-room work by the old pols of the party. In this rally there was some, but not much, top-level dictation. And little evidence that either the brass or the grass was thinking in terms of vote-catching gimmicks. For example, they tossed out a proposal to boost old age pensions by $20 a month.

Instead, these Liberals acted as though they were sure they would win the next election, and wanted to be committed only to those policies in which they sincerely believed and were prepared to implement. But I would not want to wager that the election platform or manifesto perhaps two years hence will display the same lofty standard!

If what people want is socialism, the New Party will win the next election. The Grits and Tories cannot beat the socialists at their own game. The New Party will have no difficulty topping the promises inherent in the policies framed by the Liberals.

But to go the Grits one better will almost certainly involve a brand of economic socialism that might shock the innately conservative mentality of the Canadian voter, and might increase the already great difficulties the New Party faces in its efforts to be at the same time the party of the labor unions and the farmers.

So the voters' choice is shaping up: Conservative liberalism, Liberal socialism, or socialist radicalism.

Restoring Order in Laos

BY ALAN HARVEY, Canadian Press Staff Writer

INDIA is likely to take the leading role in a new bid for peace in Laos.

If Russia approves, Britain is expected to propose that an Indian negotiator visit the pocket-sized Asian trouble spot to study ways of restoring order.

The British proposal, developed in a complex round of diplomatic exchanges involving London, Ottawa and New Delhi, may be formally announced within the next few days.

To some extent it represents a compromise. Canada has suggested that a study group, comprising representatives of Canada, India and Poland, should make an on-the-spot study of conditions in Laos to decide the best course of action.

Britain originally favored an immediate decision to reconstitute the international supervisory commission set up by the Geneva agreements of 1954. The commission was adjourned in 1958, largely on Canada's instigation.

British emphasis on a speedy recall of the commission has diminished as obstacles to early action have become apparent.

Complications include the attitude of Russia and of the Laotian government.

Russia comes into the picture as co-chairman with Britain of the Geneva conference of 1954. An additional hazard is that not all of the powers involved in the intricate web of international negotiations recognize the pro-Western government of Premier Boun Oum.

Under the new plan, India would name a "commissioner-designate" to go to Laos. Representatives of Canada and Poland, the other two members of the supervisory commission, would stand by to assist if necessary.

After the visit of the commissioner-designate, a decision would be made as to whether the commission might usefully be reconstituted, or whether some other move would be preferable.

Canada would have mixed feelings about participating in a reconstituted commission. Experience has shown this to be a thankless task but Canadian officials feel there can be no shirking of responsibilities.

The Packsack

Going Tone Deaf?

By GREGORY CLARK

A PARTY of us was weekending at a farmhouse to spend the daylight hours observing a visitation of snowy owls that have come down in unusual numbers this winter from their Arctic range. And around 9 p.m. the farmer, our host, noticed a fire burning at the far end of his woodlot. We bundled up and accompanied him across the snow to investigate.

It was a party of 20 or 30 skiers who were holding a winter wiener roast around a beautiful big bonfire. And a prettier scene you would not want to see. It had ordinary autumn corn roasts beaten a mile. The farmer was a little put out at this invasion of his property without permission, but in a few minutes we were cheerfully mingled with the young people in their ski costumes busily and efficiently dispensing the wieners, coffee and other eatables from their rucksacks. Then they gathered around the bonfire and started to sing.

It was awful. They did not sing the new pop songs which are said to be so popular with people of their age. I asked them to, but they said those songs couldn't be sung. So they sang the old familiar song-sheet songs. You never heard such discord. Of the 20 or more, not five could hold a tune. The rest just bawled, off key.

Is it possible that the upcoming generation is losing its ear? Does this perhaps explain the extraordinary sounds we hear on radio and TV under the name of pop or jazz tunes? Is it because they are going tone deaf that the young go pop?

Singers Without Talent

(From the Halifax Mail-Star)

ONE of the most intriguing aspects of modern entertainment, especially that disseminated by television, is the apparent assumption of producers that the "people" prefer singers to instrumentalists.

Daily we are exposed to vocalists (to use the jargon of the trade) of all ages, sizes, and shapes. There are a great many, both male and female, who sing any number of undistinguished, tuneless songs. Some attempt to hide their lack of talent and training with tricks—the catch in the voice, unusual movements of the body or hands. But the result is uniformly dreary, made so partly by the ludicrous "lyrics" or words which are mouthed by these performers.

All of which is inexplicable, especially when, as so often happens, these sopranos, tenors and baritones spend long periods on stage, or on-camera, while the truly talented are employed but for brief moments—in relief, as baseball enthusiasts would say.

An accomplished pianist, trumpeter, trombonist, is hired, welcomed profusely, by the master or mistress of ceremonies, allowed to perform, but only for a short time. Then on comes another singer, all too rarely a good one, all too often grinning idiotically, or slyly mumbling about the number of "hit" records he or she has made. The talent is modest, the training undoubtedly confined to a term in a high school glee club.

One office psychologist has observed that their popularity may stem from the widespread realization among viewers and listeners that they, with no difficulty, could make equally bad sounds. We are at a loss to explain the satisfaction to be found in this reaction, and only reiterate our discontent with the present emphasis on the undisciplined vocal chord.

With the Classics

But thou, my babe! shalt wander like a breeze
By lakes and sandy shores, beneath the crags
Of ancient mountain, and beneath the clouds,
Which image in their bulk both lakes and shores
And mountain crags: so shalt thou see and hear
The lovely shapes and sounds intelligible
Of that eternal language, which thy God
Utters, who from eternity doth teach Himself in all, and all things in himself.

Letters to the Editor

British Railways

As one who also has some knowledge of British Railways, may I be permitted to reply to Mr. A. L. Stevenson's letter on this subject.

It would be more correct to say the old steam engines and trains are being withdrawn, not "have been" withdrawn. Two-thirds of the trains are still steam-hauled.

It is misleading to say "the old tracks have been torn up and relaid with new" — nothing of the sort has taken place. The re-laying of the track with heavier T-rails in place of the bull-headed pattern began before the war, and has continued ever since. At least 75% remains as before, and very good track it was.

Quoting: "Today it is possible to journey from London to Brighton in a comfortable, non-stop, all-Pullman electric train with waiter service, a distance of 60 miles, in 30 minutes." It was possible to do this—so far as the accommodation and service were concerned — 60 years ago, when the all-Pullman "Southern Belle" was introduced. I lived in Croydon then, and watched it go through many times. It was steam hauled then, becoming electrically hauled about 30 years ago.

The distance from London (Victoria) to Brighton is 51 miles, not 60, and the time taken by all these trains throughout the 60 years has been, and remains, 60 minutes, not 50.

Comparisons of earnings nowadays and long ago are misleading unless the differing money-values are taken into account. The miner's weekly £5 long ago would be equivalent to $23.50 today, with the pound sterling equal to $4.86 as it was then. If today, according to Mr. Stevenson, he can earn $64 per week, he would have to pay considerable income-tax, and with that, plus the cost of living, about three times higher than it was then, he is no better off. However, I query this $64, equivalent to £22, if it is implied that this is the average figure—£15 is nearer the mark.

I wish to give a historical note on the architect of St. John's Church, recently burnt. It was designed by the late Colonel Ridgeway Wilson who made the whole drawings of the building in 1914; and I can state this as at the time I worked in his office in the old Pemberton Building. The beautiful design was entirely his own idea and I well remember doing the work with him. His next job was the Bay Street Armory.

One of 28 Victims Warned:

Tower 'Death Trap'

NEW YORK (UPI)—A U.S. air force staff sergeant reported missing with 27 other men in the collapse of a radar tower in the Atlantic Ocean described the tower as "worse than ever" in a letter to his wife.

Mrs. Kenneth Green received the letter Monday after learning her husband was one of those missing on the Texas tower which broke up in heavy seas Sunday night 70 miles southeast of New York.

"It's getting worse and worse," Mrs. Green quoted her husband as saying in his last letter, dated Jan. 10. "I just hope it lasts until I get home to see you and the kids again."

Green said it shook too much and expressed his fears to his superior officer. He called the tower "a death trap."

SINCE HURRICANE

"Ken said when he was home for Christmas that the tower made them seasick. It shook so badly since Hurricane Donna," said Mrs. Green.

Her husband told her a ladder had been torn off by the hurricane and bent around one of the tower's legs.

SOUNDS HEARD

Divers began a desperate rescue operation after sonar picked up apparent signals from survivors trapped in an air pocket of the giant radar tower. But the signals faded and died—and officials virtually gave up hope.

The tower collapsed in an 80-mile-an-hour gale and disappeared after sending a final distress call shortly after 8 p.m.

Two bodies and two empty boats were sighted.

The massive triangular steel structure, part of the air force early warning radar network, went over in 180 feet of water. Its "deck" had stood 60 feet above the sea. It was built at a cost of $21,000,000.

Havana, capital city of Cuba, was founded by the Spaniards about 1515.

streams -- all Americans, and not one of them with a fishing licence.

This is the area that to all intents and purposes is barred to Canadian fishermen — and reports now indicate the Gold River and Heber River are full of steelhead.

COMPANY KEY

Game wardens who want to patrol the area are now required to get a company key each time they want to go in. By the time they get the key, it is evident everyone in the area has been warned of the presence of a game warden.

One American has a boat on Muchalat Lake, in an area denied to Canadian sportsmen.

In effect the whole area has become a private sportsmen's paradise for company officials and employees.

TWO GATES

Game wardens must pass through two gates — one erected by the Elk River Company and the other by the Tahsis Company. Both companies are reported to be "hostile to visitors."

"We just can't stand it any more," Mr. Campbell told The Colonist. "That road is the only way to get to the west coast in that area. We must make it a public thoroughfare —and there is no nonsense about that. Surely this company (Elk River) is not as big as it thinks it is."

NO SMOKING

"Regardless of whether it is a private road or not, it is ridiculous to have somebody getting on a bus at Muchalat and not being able to smoke until they get to Campbell River, even if it is not fire season," he said.

Mr. Campbell said there is now an auto court at Gold River, but added that a person had to be pretty well screened to stay at it.

REALISTIC LOOK

He said the whole access problem "is crumbling in front of them, but they don't want to get down and take a realistic look at it."

Mr. Campbell indicated he will demand legislative action on the complicated province-wide access problem when the legislature meets later this month.

Ex-Prisoner Demands Nazi Loot

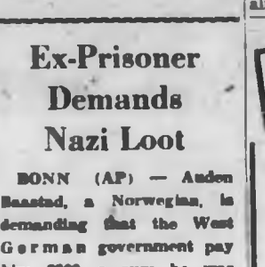

BONN (AP) — Auden Baastad, a Norwegian, is demanding that the West German government pay him $200—a sum he was sent while in a Nazi concentration camp and which he never received. Baastad says another 2,100 Norwegians might put in similar claims if he is successful.

Canada Hands Atom Reactor Over to India

BOMBAY (UPI)—India yesterday inaugurated the Canada-India experimental nuclear reactor, a $20,000,000 complex.

Prime Minister Nehru said the reactor was the "product of intimate co-operation between Canada and India" and would be used only for peaceful purposes.

Gordon Churchill, Canadian cabinet minister, handed a document to Nehru formally turning the equipment over. He said the collaboration was one more field in which the two countries worked together in raising Asia to new standards of human existence.

True Welfare Story Told by Statistics

administrators and supervisors, a staggering 83 per cent of the field staff were without university training.

In the department's 1952 annual report, Miss Amy Leigh, then assistant director of welfare, wrote:

"It is axiomatic to say the standards of service of any department of government can be only as high as the quality of the staff employed to give those services. Even with well-qualified staff, other considerations combine to lessen the effectiveness of the services they can give."

SAME REPORT

In the same report she also went on to say: "Standards of service, even with well-qualified staff, are likely to remain static, or even regress, unless there is a conscious effort made to develop the abilities of those employed."

Miss McKay, in the statement she issued after her resignation, said that her many written reports of critical situations and recommendations had failed to bring about any changes in government policy.

Among the critical situations was that relating to the mentally disturbed child.

In the 1957 report, under the heading of "Facilities lacking for defective child in care," Miss McKay said:

EQUAL NUMBER

"For 77 children in care and an equal number in the care of children's aid societies, little rehabilitative work can be done. These are children with severe physical and (or) mental handicaps. Many need the care provided in the Woodlands School, and until increased facilities are available in that institution, workers are hard pressed to make adequate foster-home placements. Special rates are paid, but replacements are frequent and much workers' time is involved which otherwise could be devoted to tasks more appropriately the responsibility of the branch . . ."

"Another group of children for whom there is little to offer in the way of treatment and cure are those in emotional stress with themselves and others."

And again, the following year, Miss McKay pointed up the critical situation. Under the heading of "Treatment Facilities Lacking, she wrote:

"Many times in the past the superintendent has stressed the lack of treatment facilities for children in British Columbia and each year the need becomes more urgent. A disproportionate amount of workers' time is being spent placing and replacing this relatively small group from one foster home to another, and a disproportionate amount of the money available for the care of children is spent to provide a mere shelter.

"Chronologically too young and as yet not 'sick' enough to be accepted into existing mental hospital programs, their every action tells how they need the protection and safety of a properly structured and staffed treatment institution."

NO EASY WAY

Even though Woodlands School is operated by the provincial mental health department there is no easy way to get such disturbed children admitted.

Children in the care of the child welfare department were placed on the waiting list and had to wait their turn. Sometimes this was a long time in coming.

At Dec. 31, 1958, six wards of the department had been on the waiting list for 1½ years and 19 for less than a year. At Dec. 31, 1959, three had been waiting for two years, two for 1½ years and 20 had been waiting for less than a year.

The CCF has been hammering away at these points for a number of years, without success. They will undoubtedly devote much of their energies to the situation when the next session gets under way on Jan. 26.

This year, bolstered by the widespread condemnation of the government's policies which followed the resignation of Miss McKay, the CCF may be able to force the government to tidy up the situation.

Discussion Ban Laid to Welfare

Charge that welfare workers in Surrey had been forbidden to discuss cases with the riding's two MLAs was levelled yesterday by Delta CCF member-elect James Rohdes.

Mr. Rhodes said he learned of the directive when he tried to investigate a welfare case in which a woman went to Essondale.

HUSBAND DEAD

He alleged that a woman in her forties woke up Dec. 23 and found her husband dead in bed. She applied for welfare at Whalley on Dec. 27.

She was told that she must first spend the $90 workmates had collected for her and although she herself did not work she was told she could not qualify if she had not registered for unemployment insurance or for winter work, said Mr. Rhodes.

He said the woman was disgusted by the treatment she had received and subsequently, on the advice of her doctor, she went to Essondale mental hospital.

When Mr. Rhodes tried to investigate the case he was shown a directive signed by Surrey welfare administrator Walter Merner, forbidding workers to speak to Delta MLAs on any case.

The MLA suggested that the reason behind this was that he recently took up a case of a resident told by welfare authorities to take his family back to Quebec where he came from.

An appeal was granted and will take place soon.

12-Month High Broken By Industrials

TORONTO (CP) — Industrials hit a new high for 1960-61, golds scored modest gains, and base metals and Western oils were firm.

Volume was 2,251,000 shares compared with 2,799,000 shares traded on Friday.

Gold stocks moved lower. Canadian kilo bars opened at $35.15 to $35.40 and closed at $35.35 to $35.45. On Friday they were $35.65 to $35.70.

Strength in Banks

MONTREAL (CP) — Banks and papers showed strength in a generally mixed market. Trading was moderately heavy.

International Utilities led winners, up 2 at 36.

U.S. Golds Gain

NEW YORK (AP) — A rally by gold mining shares and a slump in the steels were highlights.

Gold shares advanced on weekend news that U.S. citizens are prohibited from owning gold bullion abroad. Some buyers switched from ownership of the metal to gold mine stock.

Except for Homestake, which kept a gain of 1⅜, the rally of gold shares was short-lived.

Bond Issue Begins 1961 Refinancing

By HARRY YOUNG
Colonist Business Editor

The first stage of Canada's refinancing program for 1961 was announced yesterday by Finance Minister Donald Fleming. This week he is to offer a new short-term bond issue which will be used to refinance part of the outstanding 3 per cent issue due May 1, 1961.

Maturity and coupon of the new issue will be announced tomorrow, but involved is sale of $100,000,000 of short-term bonds to the public for cash, while the Bank of Canada will take another $50,000,000 in exchange for a similar holding of the May maturity.

When this financing has been completed the amount of the May 1 loan will be reduced from $525,000,000 to $3,750,000, and Mr. Fleming states that this and other requirements will be met later in the year in an orderly fashion.

The finance minister also said that the sale of savings bonds has given the treasury a balance of about $500,000,000 at the present time, but that this total would be rduced considerably by the end of the fiscal year next March.

ROYAL ENTERS SAANICH

The Royal Bank of Canada opened its first branch in the Saanich municipality yesterday when Reeve Chatterton cut the ribbon of the new premises at the corner of Douglas and Saanich Road.

Built by Farmer Construction at a cost of $75,000, the new branch is the Royal's sixth in the Greater Victoria area.

Manager of the new bank is Geoffrey Harrison, from Regina.

Lorne Snyder, manager of the main office of the Royal in Victoria said the new branch would tap a growing area which at present is without banking facilities. It will adjoin the new Saanich shopping centre.

GOLD IN DOLDRUMS

With U.S. citizens debarred from holding gold in foreign countries, the price of the precious metal dropped in free market trading at London and Toronto. Much of the gold bullion bought in Canada recently is believed to have been for U.S. clients. The new U.S. edict will eventually bring about some liquidation of bullion although the policing of U.S. gold holdings may not be simple.

11th Province Coming?

OTTAWA (CP)—A member of the Northwest Territories council proposed Monday that Canada build the foundations for a new northern province during centenary celebrations of the 1960s.

Col. H. M. Jones, Indian Affairs Branch director, said it may well be that the Mackenzie River area of the Northwest Territories and the Yukon Territory "might one day be joined together to form the 11th province."

WINTER SESSION

He spoke as the council started its winter session.

Col. Jones said the present vast area of the territories —1,500,000 square miles— poses practical problems with respect to increasing elected representation particularly from the eastern Arctic.

BARREN LANDS

"It seems to me that the eastern half of the territories, including as it does such a vast area of barren lands with a very sparse population, has special problems and special needs which will require special treatment. Continuing direct federal administration appears likely for years to come."

MAJOR CONCERN

Establishment of a new "Territory of Mackenzie" will be a "major concern" of the council session, say chairman Gordon Robertson, 43, deputy northern affairs minister.

He said setting up Mackenzie as an autonomous territory was a subject "to which it may be desirable to direct some attention."

'Berserk' Shooting Baffles Authorities

FRESNO, Calif. (UPI) — A Fresno State College sophomore, his schoolteacher wife and their two small children were found dead Monday in what investigators described as a baffling triple murder-suicide.

Victims were George Kruszelnicki, 25; his wife Patricia, 29, and their children, Beth, 3, and Peter, who would have been two next month. All were shot in the head with a 12-gauge shotgun in their Fresno home.

"We have uncovered no motive and can assume only that Kruszelnicki went berserk," said deputy coroner Fred Pipkin. "Relatives and neighbors have described the couple as very devoted with a happy family life. We may never know the reason."

'Male Club' Men Cited for Smut

CHICAGO (UPI)—A grand jury, climaxing a six-month investigation of the "Adonis Male Club" and the "International Body Culture Association," Monday named 52 persons on charges of conspiracy to mail obscene matter or of sending such matter through the mails.

Named in the indictment were actors, teachers, students, truck drivers and one clergyman.

Officials said there would have been additional names among the clergymen but in some cases investigators contacted superiors of men involved and obtained agreement that those involved would submit to psychiatric treatment.

"Postal authorities have repeatedly said that the biggest increase in obscenity has occurred in the field of correspondence between males with deviate tendencies," said a spokesman.

Sources said the probe led to the suicide of an educator in New York, an attempted suicide in Indiana and the flight from the U.S. of one in South Carolina.

Squatters Die In Huge Fire

HONG KONG (UPI) — The worst fire in years raged through a squatter settlement in this colony's Kowloon section Monday, killing at least four persons, injuring 11 and making 11,000 persons homeless.

The fire over eight acres was fanned by monsoon winds.

Ailing Girl

Kidnapping Suspects Charged

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. (UPI) — A tattooed ex-convict and his pregnant wife were booked on kidnap charges Monday in the disappearance of a six-year-old girl who suffers from a heart ailment.

A hairclip that belonged to the girl was found in the couple's car after they were arrested Sunday at Livermore, Calif.

HAIRCLIP FOUND

Richard Arlen Lindsey, 30, and his wife Dixie Elaine, 23, were returned here Monday. Three witnesses identified them as the couple who took Rose Marie Riddle into their car at a labor camp near Shafter, Calif., last Thursday.

FBI agents found the hairclip in the Lindsey car. The child's parents identified it as one belonging to Rose Marie.

NO KNOWLEDGE

Lindsey and his wife denied knowledge of the girl and said they had no clues to her whereabouts.

Spatterings of blood and a two-foot tire iron were found on the front seat of Lindsey's car. Lindsey said he kept the tire iron for "protection" and Mrs. Lindsey said the bloodstains were caused when she struck her nose on the dashboard.

Show Business

By Dick Williams

Actor Mitchell Kowal recently returned to Hollywood from film-making in Europe, his fourth trip in three years for feature and TV film roles. His problem on returning was to get the "big boys," supposedly on the lookout for new talent, to catch one of his TV shows.

Kowal tried everything—ads in the Hollywood trade papers, postcards, phone calls and telegrams asking casting agents, producers and directors to catch certain shows. He even considered skywriting.

But it seems no one will watch a TV show if you ask him. Then Kowal got a brainstorm. He sent out 500 notes telling the "big boys" not to watch an upcoming show.

"I'll be darned if everyone in Hollywood didn't catch that show," Kowal told me, "and I got a row of casting assignments as a result!"

Confusion Still Keynote In James-Dorohoy Deal

What with a three-game losing streak and a game here against Edmonton Flyers tonight, Victoria Cougar coach George Agar has enough troubles without getting involved again in the Eddie Dorohoy-Gerry James mess.

But a report from Winnipeg claiming James is ready to sign with Winnipeg Warriors and that Eddie Dorohoy will join the Cougars had Agar up in arms last night.

"I wish," he said carefully. "That those so-and-sos in Winnipeg would stop telling everybody that Eddie Dorohoy is going to play with us. How can they know that when I don't even know it myself?"

For those who may have missed the odd installment, the James-Dorohoy saga goes something like this:

Toronto Maple Leafs, who own James' contract gave Cougars rights to negotiate with him. Cougars tried mightily, but James wouldn't say yes or no. James lives in Winnipeg and Warriors want him, so they offered Cougars rights to Eddie Dorohoy in exchange for rights to James. Cougars said yes, Toronto said no, and James said maybe.

Now comes word from Winnipeg that Leafs have changed their mind, that James will be signed in time for Wednesday's Western Hockey League game against Vancouver, and that Dorohoy will play for Cougars.

A FEW DETAILS

Meanwhile, back at the Arena, Agar was pointing out a few minor details:

Dorohoy is still recovering from a broken leg, and may not even be ready this season. He is still under suspension by Winnipeg for not reporting to Winnipeg when his contract was sold, and can't play for anybody until this is straightened out.

Even if he is ready, and the suspension lifted, Cougars would still have to meet Dorohoy's price, and Silent Ed has never been one to sell his services cheaply.

THIS SEASON ONLY

"Besides," Agar summed up, "the James-Dorohoy deal is for this season only. We'd look pretty darn stupid paying him a fancy price, finding out we couldn't use him, then giving him back to Winnipeg next season.

"Dorohoy's leg was X-rayed by our own doctor yesterday. Until we get a report, nothing can be done, no matter what they say in Winnipeg."

The conversation switched to Cougars, their 6-4 loss to the Buckaroos in Portland Sunday, and their prospects against the Flyers tonight.

"We played better Sunday," Agar said. "I think they'll be hitting harder against Edmonton."

Agar added he and Flyer coach Bud Poile may be talking trade after the game. Flyers have lost 11 of their last 12 and Cougars are in rough shape too, so a deal could be made tonight.

Cougars led twice Sunday, and were pressing for the tying goal late in the third period. But when Agar lifted goalie Marcel Pelletier for an extra forward, Art Jones scored on the empty net.

All Cougar scoring was done by the Ford-Goyer-Saunders line. Bill Saunders scored twice, his 14th and 15th goals of the season; Goyer added his 19th, and Ford his 14th. Jones had two goals for Portland, and Arnie Schmautz, Pat Ginnell, Ron Matthews and Bill McCulley got the others.

FAN FARE

By Walt Ditzen

AT THE 19th

With Harry Young

Sitting around on Sunday waiting for the rain to stop—which it didn't—this golfer sat thinking about the changes that have taken place in the game since he started playing it over 40 years ago.

Obviously of course, there were no such appurtenances as caddy carts or electric carts. No one had yet hit upon the idea of a peg tee to take the place of the sand mound, although I remember someone having a little round rubber cup which he found useful to elevate the ball when the sand provided was too dry, or even non-existent.

There were no steel shafts and top players spent a lifetime looking around for perfect pieces of hickory for their clubs. Clubs were not numbered. The woods were the driver, brassie, spoon or baffy, in that order of strength while the irons were cleek, driving iron, midiron, lofted iron, mashie, and niblick.

Some daring St. Andreans carried a jigger—not a 19th hole measure—among their iron clubs as well to play the long run up shots so popular at the home of golf. The putter could be either wood or metal.

Golf balls were even more numerous and varied than they are today. The gutty was just about dead, and the new rubber-cored balls were made in several sizes. Floaters were an oversize version of the modern ball and, as their name indicates, they were useful on courses with water hazards—they did not sink.

Irons were not made of stainless steel, and one of the duties of every (good) caddie was to polish up the player's rusty irons with a piece of emery paper after every round. Some caddies kept rubbing away at the irons as the play proceeded. Eventually of course the rubbing had its effect and the clubs became "light headed."

I think it was J. H. Taylor, although it could have been Jim Braid who told me he never had his irons polished, "because in sunshine the reflection off the polished metal could dazzle you."

Of all the innovations which have gone to make golf a much easier game than it used to be I suppose the steel-shafted club must be given first place. The ball springs off the modern club and goes a fair distance even if it has not been perfectly hit, in sharp contrast to what happened with the old wooden shafts that demanded a flawless execution if good results were to follow.

The ball too has improved, but not to the degree clubs have done.

For the pros at least, I suppose the greatest innovation of the past 20 years has been the development of the pitching and sand wedges. These are the tools the pros use to roll three shots into two from positions within 100 yards of the pin.

Yet although there have been all these changes in equipment the game remains singularly unchanged. There is only one major difference, apart from penalties and interpretations of the rules, that I can remember from 40 years ago.

That came from the abolition of the stymie. The Americans cut out this putting green hazard many years before the R. and A. finally unbent, and relinquished a feature of match-play golf that many people thought to be unfair and out of line with the general concept of the game.

Many of our present-day players may never have played the stymie rule, and some younger ones may never have heard of it.

Anyway, in a two-ball match an opponent's ball blocking the way to the hole could not be lifted unless the two balls were within six inches of one another—most score cards doubled as stymie measures—and the player further away from the hole had to exert his ingenuity by either rounding the obstructing ball with a shot that had "side" on it or by lofting over it into the hole with a niblick or other lofted implement.

Stymies were not always accidental. The player putting first always had it in mind to place his shot to a position that "might" cause an obstruction to his opponent.

In other words he would attempt to be in the hole, or past it, if the other ball was being putted in the opposite direction, or if both balls were being putted from the same angle, he would prefer to be short so that the chance of an obstruction to his opponent might be created.

I don't think I would like to see a return of the stymie, but one of these days I would like to play a friendly singles match using the old rule just for "auld lang syne."

But apart from that golf is still golf, and the changes though many and complicated are confined to such technicalities as provisional balls, unplayable lies, hazard penalties and moving balls on the green and the elimination of the penalty for hitting the flagstick.

Even those all-weather giants of the buttons thought discretion the better part of valor Sunday when it was decided to postpone the match between holders George Bigelow and Laurie Carroll and challengers Laurie Kerr and George Andrews.

The match was to have been played at Gorge, and there wasn't much option left to the players for the tenth hole was virtually a lake as a result of the non-stop 24 hours rainfall.

The game will be played this Sunday at the same course, weather permitting, and so will the junior buttons replay between Al MacLeod and Dick Freeman, the holders, and Dick Munn and Bill Hodson, the challengers.

This is the time of the year for annual meetings. The B.C. Golf Association gathering is to be held in Vancouver on Friday, Jan. 27; the Royal Canadian Golf Association meets at Montreal a week later on Friday, Feb. 3, and the Victoria District Committee's meeting has been called for Tuesday, Feb. 7 at 8.00 at Gorge Vale.

Fan Injured By Comets

SEATTLE (AP)—An assault in which a Seattle hockey fan was beaten into unconsciousness after Sunday night's Seattle-Spokane game brought threats, charges and counter-charges Monday.

The felled fan, Bill Carr, 36, was in hospital with a brain concussion and bruises. His wife, Elsa, said charges would be filed against the Spokane players she contended were responsible for the attack.

Bad feeling between the two clubs was heightened by the trouble, which broke out near the stairway to the Spokane dressing room.

Roy McBride, coach and general manager of the visiting Comets, said his team would not return to Seattle "without proper police protection around our dressing room; this is the worst town in the league."

Keith Allen, Seattle coach and general manager, called the Spokane players "bush" and said they provoked trouble because they were "sore over losing 2-1."

FORMAL PROTEST

The Seattle president, Marv Burke, said he would file a formal protest with the Western Hockey League over the conduct of the Comets. He called it "detrimental to the sport."

The flareup is the second between the two teams in a fortnight. Frank Arnett, Seattle player, was suspended for six games for striking an official after he was penalized for a mixup on the ice with Spokane's Forbes Kennedy.

SPOKE NASTILY

Spokane forward Colin Kilburn said Sunday night's trouble came after he had been struck by a thrown object and then Carr spoke nastily to him.

When informed that the Carrs were considering a suit, McBride stated that the Comets would back the players "to the hilt."

"If we're sued, we'll sue the Seattle Hockey Club in return for failing to provide us adequate police protection to and from the dressing room as provided under league rules," McBride said.

HE BLED

"Kilburn was hit on the back of the head by an object thrown by a fan. The skin was broken and he bled. No player should have to stand for anything like that.

"After a hard, tough game in Seattle, our players have to stand for both verbal and physical abuse from the fans who hurry from their seats so they can spit, swear and throw things at them."

Arnie's Birdie Beats Balding After Big Comeback Effort

Arnold Palmer shot a birdie three on a sudden-death playoff hole Sunday to beat out Toronto's Al Balding for top money of $2,800 in the $20,000 San Diego Open golf tournament.

Balding, who went into the final round tied with Vancouver's Stan Leonard and Eric Monti of Los Angeles for the lead, shot a five-under-par 66 on the last 18, but the remarkable Palmer was one stroke better to force the playoff. Included in the comeback was a 40-foot putt for an eagle three.

Both had finished the 72 regulation holes 13 under par at 271. Leonard soared to a 73 and wound up in a tie for ninth place. He won $710 compared to $1,900 for Balding. Monti wound up tied for 17th place with a 75.

Gary Player of South Africa took third money with 275, good for $1,400.

"You don't consider playing games with people who are suing you for $10,000,000," he said, referring to an AFL anti-trust suit . . . Bill Pears, 15, of Montreal, set a new 100-yard boys' backstroke record in the 15-16 age group yesterday, swimming it in 1.01.6, two-tenths of a second better than the old mark held by Bob Wheaton of Victoria.

MICKEY MANTLE signed his 1961 contract with New York Yankees yesterday, getting a reported $75,000 to become the highest-paid player in the American League. It was a boost of $10,000 from last year. . . . Teammate Roger Maris was named Sultan of Swat for last season yesterday, receiving a $2,000 diamond-studded crown from the Maryland Professional Baseball Writers' Association. . . . Oakland Raiders settled their internal differences yesterday and decided not to move their American Football League franchise to San Diego. . . . Ottawa Rough Riders have signed tackle Jerry Beabout of Purdue University, seventh draft choice of Baltimore Colts.

Last night's scores: Navy 13, Army 5, Pattersons 6, IAA 4.

Chicago has Glenn Hall, Pattersons have George Hall, and everybody's happy except the opposition.

George was the difference for Pattersons again last night, making 30 saves as the Pats edged Independent Athletic Association, 6-4, in a Commercial Hockey League game before a crowd of about 1,000 at Memorial Arena.

He was about as tough to beat as his National Hockey League namesake, and was particularly brilliant in the third period, when he stopped two breakaways with his club ahead, 5-4.

Toby Wilson had got IAA off to a 2-0 lead with a pair of goals in the first period. Pattersons came back with three, two by Bob Jones and one by Bob Fowler. Gary Barlow tied it up for IAA, but Fowler made it 4-3 at 18.20 of the second period.

TWO BIG SAVES

Arnold Elliott broke the game open at 7.40 of the third period going the length of the ice to fire a hard shot for the winning goal. Then Hill made his two big saves, and Orv Coulter got the insurance goal.

In the first game, Navy whipped a shorthanded Army club, 13-5. The Soldiers, with some of their best players on flood duty, dressed only 10 men.

John Morris had four goals and two assists for Navy, Emil Chobater and Ron Cook each scored a hat trick, and Cliff Unren, Johnny Bond and Bernie Webber added singles. Joe Thir, Larry Meyers, Pat McNeill, Whitey Ashworth and Cliff Noonan replied for Army.

West Indies In Good Spot

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuters)—The West Indies built up a lead of 316 runs by the close of play in the third cricket Test Match with Australia Monday and moved into a strong position to square the five-match series.

The West Indians had Australia all out for 202 runs and then scored 179 by the close of play with three second-innings wickets still standing. The West Indies scored 339 in their first innings.

The first match in the test series ended in a tie and Australia won the second contest.

Half Way Captures Ninth Cage Victory

Half Way House made it nine victories in 10 starts in the Senior "B" Men's Basketball League last night, downing second-place Kings Hotel, 55-48, to open up a nine-point lead.

George Denison was high scorer for Half Way with 14 points and Ken McCulloch turned in 14 for Kings.

Victoria University moved into a second-place tie in the Senior "B" Women's League, beating Dockettes, 26-18. It was the Dockettes' sixth straight loss.

In the closest game of the night, Victoria University took a three-point lead in the first half and made it stand up for a 25-22 win over Chinese Students in the Junior Men's League.

Scorers follow:

Half Way House—Jones 10, Bennett [illegible], Denison 14, Tomlinson 8, Patterson 8, Fripp 2, Strank 1, Vowles 4. Total—55.

Vancouver Surge Nips Warriors, 4-3

Vancouver Canucks, who can handle anybody on the prairies but Calgary, saved all their scoring for the third period last night and edged Winnipeg Warriors, 4-3, to move back into a first-place tie with Stamps in the Western Hockey League.

It was the third win in five starts on the prairie tour for Canucks. Both defeats were at the hands of the Stamps, and both came at times when Canucks could have had the lead or a share of it with a victory.

Warriors, looking like anything but a last-place club in recent games, got off to a 2-0 lead on goals by Gord Redahl and Gord Labossiere before Canucks finally broke loose.

Bruce Carmichael scored his [illegible]th goal for Canucks at 8.20 of the third period, and was back to score again at the 12-minute mark to tie it up.

Orland Kurtenbach put Canucks ahead at 13.47, slapping in a rebound. The scrappy Warriors came back to tie again as Labossiere, who had set up Winnipeg's first goal, scored his second of the night. But that was to be all, as Canucks kept up the pressure and finally got the winner from Dave Duke on a three-man rush with less than five minutes remaining.

Sunday at Seattle, veteran Rudy Filion took over the WHL scoring leadership, assisting on Bill MacFarland's two goals as the Totems edged Spokane Comets, 2-1. Del Topoli scored for Spokane.

Filion, who collected seven points last week, now has a total of 56, two more than Ron Leopold of Calgary.

Unitas, Van Brocklin Stars of Pro Bowl

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Johnny Unitas, barely stealing the show from the retiring Norm Van Brocklin, hit Lennie Moore on two long and decisive pass plays Sunday as the West defeated the East 35-31 in the Pro Bowl.

Unitas, voted the top player of this annual National Football League all-star event for the second straight year, passed for 218 yards and helped set up the West's final touchdown with a 25-yard run.

Unitas threw one 44-yard scoring pass to Moore, his Baltimore teammate, and hit him again on a 66-yarder that put the West in position for another touchdown.

But Van Brocklin, who quarterbacked Philadelphia to the 1960 NHL championship, hardly finished his 11-year pro career in disgrace.

The Dutchman, who has said repeatedly this would be his last game, tied a bowl record by pitching three touchdown passes. Altogether, Van Brocklin threw for 288 yards, completing 17 of 36. Unitas hit on 10 of 18.

Jim Taylor, Green Bay's driving fullback, set a bowl record by scoring three touchdowns, all on runs of two yards or less.

Derbies Down-Graded In Fishing Club Plans

By ALEX MERRIMAN

Four of the major outdoor clubs in the Victoria area have scheduled annual general meetings for the next seven days . . . and at least two groups are expected to adopt a policy of less emphasis on club fishing derbies.

Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association holds its annual meeting at 8 p.m. tonight in the Liberal Hall, 1322A Government Street, and South Vancouver Island Rangers, Inc. holds its annual meeting and installation of officers at the Luxton clubhouse tonight at 8 p.m.

Next Monday the Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association holds its annual meeting, election of officers, trophy and button presentations at the Naden Auditorium (main gate), starting at 8 p.m. with recreation deputy minister Dave Turner as scheduled guest speaker.

Next Tuesday the RCN Anglers' Association will hold its annual meeting at 8 p.m. in the theatre of the naval technical apprentices school at HMCS Naden.

Tonight's meeting of the Saanich Anglers will centre around election of a new slate of officers . . . and the big question is who will be the next president.

TURNED IT DOWN

Dick James retires as president and it has been reliably reported his brother, Jack, has been suggested for the post, but turned it down. Ray Ritchie says he has someone lined up, but won't disclose who. Some have suggested he should re-enter the fold as president.

Long service secretary-treasurer Bill Hoskyn is stepping down and its is expected Bob Jones will be in the running for the position.

NEW IDEA

The meeting is expected to come up with a spanking new arrangement for the annual ladder derby, based more along the lines of the Cowichan Bay ladder derby. It is also expected there will be reduced emphasis, or a change, in the annual Solarium derby.

At the Ranger meeting George Clark will be installed head Ranger, Cam Vaesen assistant head ranger, Jack King treasurer and Bob Johnson secretary.

When the navy anglers meet next week they will be presented with a program pointing the club towards becoming a "truly sports club, with the only prizes being buttons and trophies."

COST REDUCED

Cost of membership may be reduced to $1, from $2.50, and to 50 cents for juniors.

President Bert Dodd is expected to seek a second term. His campaign pledge—"Put the sport back in fishing."

He envisions a club dance, or two, a friendly get-together for a fish-off and a barbecue as the accent swings to club activities.

Small-mouthed bass are expected to be added to the list of fish eligible for RCN trophy buttons.

Ignored Weather, Hit Jackpot

Gale force winds and flooding rains on Sunday didn't stop the fishing Broughton Street barber, Henry Rollin, and wife Ida from going after winter springs at Pedder Bay and coming back with a 20-pounder, a 14-pounder, a 13½ pounder and an 11-pounder. All were caught on Rhys Davis Super Strip-Teaser with fresh anchovies as bait, 100 feet of line and eight ounces of weight, and a one-foot-long home-made herring dodger, trolled right in the bay, the William Head side of the navy mooring buoy.—(Colonist photo by Alec Merriman.)

Sunday's score: Gorge Hotel 4, Kickers 3.

Next game: Saturday, [illegible] vs [illegible], 2 p.m., Royal Athletic Park.

One by one, Gorge Hotel is knocking off the leaders in the Victoria and District Football League.

First they beat third-place Canadian Scottish. Then, ignoring rain that forced postponement of three other matches, they upset second-place Kickers, 4-3, Sunday at Beacon Hill Park.

The Gorgemen had to overcome a 3-1 half-time deficit to win. Chummy Crabbe and John Erdel scored to tie the game, and Bill Hope clicked on a long shot five minutes from full time for the winning goal.

Don McGee had given Gorge a 1-0 lead, but Kick Nellestijn, Henri Vanderhorst and league scoring leader Mel Cooper tallied for Kickers before the first half ended.

May Be Back

Contrary to statements last fall, quarterback Randy Duncan may be back with B.C. Lions this fall. Duncan, all-American with Iowa in 1959, indicated to Lions' coach Wayne Robinson recently that he could be persuaded to return.

Rangers Keep Heads, Jobs

Put Away That Axe, Alfie

New York Rangers are apparently trying to keep their heads with heads-up hockey.

Before their current road trip, a grim coach Alfie Pike promised his club that "heads would roll" if they didn't show some improvement. Rangers, taking him at his word, have won two and tied two of their four games on the road, including a 3-1 victory over Chicago Black Hawks Sunday night.

In other games Sunday, Toronto Maple Leafs came from behind twice for a 6-4 win over the last-place Boston Bruins, and Montreal Canadiens salvaged a 4-4 tie with Detroit Red Wings on a goal by Bob Turner with 12 seconds left to play.

Turner's goal, his first of the season, came on a desperation long shot that took a weird bounce three in front of the net and slipped over the glove of goalie Hank Bassen.

Frank Mahovlich, the league's top goal-getter, picked up his 37th of the season at Boston, tying a club record and leaving him with 26 games to score 13 goals and tie Maurice Richard's record.

The race for the Vezina Trophy was closer than ever when all results were in. Goalie Johnny Bower of Toronto has allowed 115 goals, Glenn Hall of Chicago has yielded 116, and the Montreal combination of Jacques Plante and Charlie Hodge has given up 117.

Soccer on Friday To Avoid Strike

LONDON (AP)—The English Football League Monday ordered all of next Saturday's soccer games switched to Friday to beat the threatened players' strike deadline.

The players, demanding more money and a new contracts system, have voted to strike Saturday.

League secretary Alan Hardaker told all 92 league clubs to make arrangements to bring their games forward one day.

He said the clubs would be advised further after a meeting scheduled for Wednesday between the league, the Professional Footballers' Association and the ministry of labor.

Massive Arrests

Katanga Leader Foils Death Plot

LEOPOLDVILLE (UPI) — President Moishe Tshombe of Katanga province announced Monday a "massive wave of arrests" has smashed a plot to assassinate him and his ministers. Most of those arrested are backers of Patrice Lumumba.

Unconfirmed reports said 18 Europeans, most connected with international banking circles, had been arrested.

A report from the Ruanda-Urundi frontier said Congolese troops had killed three Belgian paratroopers and captured nine others. The UN said one of the nine had been severely beaten during a march in captivity to Stanleyville.

In Brussels, Belgium denied any deaths but admitted eight Belgian soldiers had been captured.

Meanwhile, a train carrying Swedish troops and Katangans which was attacked by Baluba tribesmen with the loss of one life Sunday was reported stalled again 200 miles northwest of Elisabethville.

Famed Rioter Near Death In Belgium

BRUSSELS (UPI) — Gendarmes Monday fired on hundreds of Socialist-led strikers who attacked a street car in a Liege suberb.

At least two demonstrators were wounded. One former Belgian middleweight boxing champion Joseph Wousdem — was near death with a bullet in the head.

The rioting broke out amid government claims of a large-scale back-to-work movement by the strikers.

Dayal Stays In Congo Dag Rules

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) —UN Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold has rejected Congolese President Joseph Kasavubu's demand that Rajeshwar Dayal be removed as chief UN representative in the Congo.

Kasavubu charged the Indian diplomat acted in an "irresponsible" manner.

Hammarskjold took Kasavubu to task for reporting the "murder" of the education minister of Kivu province, Rwakabubu Cyprien, who was arrested by pro-Lumumba forces and found safe by UN.

Castro Attacks Guerrillas

HAVANA (UPI) — Early government successes in a major drive to crush guerrilla resistance in the central Cuba mountains were reported Monday.

Militia forces pushed guerrilla troops out of the big city of Santa Clara, capturing 10 or 12 men, and also regained the city of Fomento, in rebel hands for two days last week.

Both cities are in Las Villas province and the reports were the first to indicate the guerrillas had mustered sufficient strength in the Sierra de Escambray to launch attacks against major population centres.

Premier Castro was reported to be personally leading the new government drive to wipe out efforts to establish an "insurgent government" on Cuban soil. His 30,000 troops are pitted against 4,000 rebels.

B.C. Damage Mounts In Widespread Deluge

VANCOUVER (CP) — CNR executive G. R. Graham said Monday the company may have to build five new bridges in the Fraser Canyon, where its mainline track was taken away Sunday by slides.

He said it would be "two weeks or more" before the line would open.

Two storms Monday missed southwestern B.C., sparing the populous area from more damage caused by weekend floods. Two persons are dead and heavy property loss followed the deluge.

The forecast was for scattered showers today and Wednesday.

Mr. Graham said the bridges would have to be built "where I believe there have never been bridges before."

PARALLEL LINES

A CPR spokesman could not estimate when the company's line would open. In the canyon the two lines parallel on opposite banks.

Highways Minister Gaglardi said it will be three days at least before traffic is moving over the Trans-Canada Highway through the Fraser Canyon and in at least one spot it will be considerably longer. He said damage to the highway may reach $750,000.

Some of the 150 or more B.C. families forced out returned Monday as this picture appeared in the wake of the storm which dumped from four to 10 inches of rain over the areas:

TRAINMAN KILLED

R. J. McMillan of Kamloops, CNR bridge master, was crushed to death beneath a slide as he inspected a washout in the canyon. Other death was on Vancouver Island.

The PGE was blocked by a slide near Lillooet. It was expected to be cleared today.

A $130,000 sewage-treatment plant was washed away in North Vancouver, creating a pollution problem as raw sewage from 500 homes poured into Lynn Creek.

The Hope-Princeton Highway was the only major road still open to the east, and was said to be threatened with blockage by the collapse of cliffs.

Spilling, Boiling, Angry Floods Spread Havoc

Goldstream became a roaring, angry river during Sunday's rainstorm and overflowed its banks at the picnic grounds leaving scores of picnic tables centred in a foot of swirling water.—(Colonist photo by Alec Merriman.)

More Rain Due

Dripping City Drying Out

The weekend weather's fury left Greater Victoria and surrounding areas with flooded homes and roads, road washouts, large trees strewn across roads, shortage of fresh water and plugged storm drains.

Homes in Happy Valley, Luxton and Langford were flooded.

Public works officials and homeowners alike breathed a sigh of relief when it finally stopped raining Sunday afternoon.

NEXT BARRAGE

Weatherman William Mackie, expecting the next barrage of a series of Pacific storms to hit overnight and today, said it will be windy, but may not be as wet.

In Greater Victoria Sunday, municipal works crews answered 100 complaints in Saanich, 39 in the city, a dozen in Esquimalt and four in Oak Bay.

Most of the complaints were of flooded basements, many caused by non-existent or inadequate home connection to nearby drainage systems.

WITHIN INCH

When water came within one inch of entering the home of W. H. Lang, Luxton Road, Mrs. Lang took her Sunday roast to a neighbor's house, the family jacked up their furniture and evacuated at 3 p.m.

Homes on Brock Road, Langford, were surrounded by flood water as an adjacent ditch overflowed during the storm.

WATER CUT OFF

Water was cut off for half a day from 75 per cent of the homes in Sooke Sunday when Lannon Creek ground through its bank near Saseenos, washing away a section of the Sooke Highway and Sooke's water main.

The entire section disappeared as biting water ate a hole 40 feet long and 15 feet deep. Highways department work crews converted a nearby logging road into an overnight detour.

Water service was restored Sunday to Sooke, apart from two homes serviced by a spur line, which were without water until noon yesterday.

Highways crews installed temporary culverts at the washout yesterday and backfilled the hole with gravel, restoring traffic by 6 p.m.

SAME AREA

In the same general area:

A shoulder of the West Coast Road was washed out by torrential Mink Creek, beyond Point No Point resort.

Flooded Sooke River deposited piles of logs on the uninhabited upper portion of Sooke River Road. Loggers will clear the logs.

Dewdney Flats on the Victoria-Sooke highway, was covered by four feet of water and cars were diverted on nearby old Sooke Road.

Strong winds following the rain toppled several trees on East Sooke Road, which were chopped up into blocks by power saws and rolled off the road.

COUPLE OF FEET

Sooke Road near Kangaroo Road intersection was under a couple feet of water.

Happy Valley Road was flooded but cars were able to get through.

Patricia Bay airport had 3.97 inches in a 48-hour period ending at 4 p.m. Monday.

Victoria had 2.25 inches during the weekend, bringing January's total so far just above five inches. The record is 13.28 inches, in 1935.

Amateur Pruners Courting Summons

Victorians who take it on themselves to prune city-owned trees without authority could be prosecuted, members of city council park committee observed yesterday.

The warning came after one resident protested against being billed $10 for "correction" of his pruning attempts.

"He went out and butchered the trees," said parks administrator W. H. Warren. "We cut off the stubs and billed him."

Police-Fire Hall

Watery Site Saanich Issue

Saanich council is taking another look at the site of its planned police and fire headquarters between Swan Lake and Douglas Street. Lately the site has been under water.

Originally all members of council voted in favor of building the double-duty building there.

But last night Reeve George Chatterton found three members of council opposed to the site after inspecting the area Sunday.

"I can't understand how anybody could consider the property, especially after seeing it over the weekend," Coun. Leslie Passmore led off.

"It would be unsound to go to swampy ground like that with the heaviest equipment we have — fire trucks."

Coun. Harold Todd and Coun. Ainslie Worthington agreed that they could not support use of the site.

Saanich council has started expropriation proceedings to acquire the site but the architect charged with designing the building recently suggested soil tests should be made.

At the last council meeting it was decided to order the soil tests and — on Coun. Passmore's suggestion — to consider erecting the building on higher land already owned by council which was earmarked for construction of a new municipal hall.

Police Ask Hike Of $9.51 Month

Parity with salaries paid in Vancouver is the basic objective of Victoria police union in forthcoming wage negotiations with city police commission.

Union representatives appeared before the commission yesterday to outline contract clauses which they would like reopened this year.

Wage parity with Vancouver, it was pointed out, would mean an increase of about $9.51 per month for a first-class constable in Victoria, now receiving $456.49 a month.

A first-class constable in Vancouver receives $466 a month.

Union also asked to have its group insurance plan withdrawn from the contract. Union members explained the union is carrying this policy on its own, having already paid off the city in full for its past participation.

Commission also received the police department's preliminary budget for the coming year. Amount involved is $709,000, and is still subject to "pruning."

Included here is a request by Chief Const. John Blackstock for addition of six men to the present strength of 95 officers and men, one policewoman and two matrons.

Board Awaiting Action by B.C.

A delay of at least two months in the scheduled March vote on new school construction for Greater Victoria was announced last night by school board chairman W. C. Gelling.

Uncertainty over exactly which recommendations contained in the recent Chant report will be implemented by the government prompted the delay, he said.

"We daren't go ahead as planned now," said Mr. Gelling. "It wouldn't be fair to either the public or the school board."

SECRET MEETING

Mr. Gelling said following a secret committee meeting at which trustees discussed the issue, it was decided "the whole thing should be deferred at least until we have some definite information on what changes might be implemented."

This should be available by April 1, he said, giving the board time to complete its planning for submission of the bylaw by the latter part of May or early June.

"We want to have this bylaw vote completed before the summer holidays get under way," Mr. Gelling said.

BE IN TROUBLE

Officials reported last night that local schools will be able to cope with the expected influx of new pupils this September, regardless of the delay, but "we'd really be in trouble if there was no additional accommodation by September, 1962," the chairman said.

NO DECISIONS

In anticipation of the changes recommended in the Chant report, the school board did not make any final decisions in planning for a new three-year building program.

Biggest headache for planners will be the decision on whether Grade 7—one of the fastest-growing sections of the local school population — remains in junior high or becomes part of elementary schools as recommended by the Chant royal commission.

"I don't think the delay will cause any harm," said Mr. Gelling. "Probably as a result of waiting a couple of months we will have better planning. We'll certainly try our darnedest to see that is the case."

Military Tattoo Suggested To Mark City's Centenary

A military tattoo with all the services participating may be one of the events proposed to mark Victoria's 100th birthday as a city in 1962.

Ald. Geoffrey Edgelow, chairman of the Greater Victoria Celebrations Association, said yesterday that he has in mind suggesting such a tattoo.

"It would be a great attraction to people visiting Seattle for the Century 21 exposition," he said.

The celebrations association, asked by Mayor Percy Scurrah to act as a working committee to recommend a centennial program and special projects, will hold its annual meeting tonight at city hall.

Church Permit Issued

The city yesterday issued a building permit for reconstruction of St. John's Anglican Church, reduced last month to a smoke-stained shell by a pre-dawn fire.

The permit is for structural rebuilding valued at $150,000 by Farmer Construction Company. It will include floor, walls where necessary, and roof.

First part of the work, to begin immediately, will be to replace columns in the church with steel posts, later to be encased in stone. Floor and roof construction will follow.

SPCA Offer Accepted

Saanich council last night formally accepted, on a month-to-month basis, an offer by the SPCA to impound and destroy dogs. Saanich employees will patrol the municipality and pick up strays and deliver them to the SPCA.

To Fight Fire

$50,000 Service

Fighting the fire that destroyed Government House, City Manager C. C. Wyatt said yesterday, cost Victoria taxpayers "close to $50,000."

He used this example to illustrate the cost to Victorians of providing services for tax-exempt provincial and other properties.

Mr. Wyatt made the point after the B.C. Tuberculosis Society proposed that the city provide land free or at a token price behind the health and welfare centre on Cook for a $65,000 tuberculosis clinic, which would be deeded to the city or the province and thus be tax-free.

Health committee recommended that city council take the proposal to the Greater Victoria intermunicipal committee, and ask the adjoining municipalities to share the cost of the property and the equivalent of taxes.

Ever-Optimistic Guest Rises from the Ashes

Peter Bruton's Capital Notebook

GUESTWARD HO! The way I hear it, Vancouver lawyer Gowan Guest is still determined to win the Conservative nomination for the Esquimalt-Saanich byelection.

Mr. Guest, it may be remembered, wrote letters to Conservatives and people he thought were Conservatives asking them if they would reply giving their views on the suitability of his being a candidate.

The views of a number of people who replied must have shocked Mr. Guest, recently retired as Prime Minister John Diefenbaker's executive assistant.

Anyway, the advent of Mr. Guest upon the local scene brought cries of "carpetbagger" and the Liberals, who had been in a low ebb since they ran a very poor third some 15,000 votes off the pace in the 1958 election, immediately began to get optimistic.

Mr. Guest, who was going to settle in Saanich and open a law office here, disappeared from the scene shortly afterwards and apparently went back to his old law firm in Vancouver.

But now he has risen from the ashes, so to speak, and is even sending us speeches he has made castigating the Liberals.

The one thing that will help Mr. Guest win the nomination on Feb. 17 is if a large number of candidates seek the honor and thus split the vote.

Apparently there's talk in the area of a judgeship here and an appointment to a federal body there, but after all this can have nothing to do with Mr. Guest who, even if he wanted to, is not in a position to reward the faithful.

BRIEF ENCOUNTER: "Is the government going to order any sort of inquiry into its welfare services?" we quickly asked Premier Bennett as he rushed into cabinet yesterday.

"You're looking healthy aren't you?" shot back the premier as he slid through the door.

End of interview.

CONVERSATION STOPPER: Woman driver whose attention was momentarily diverted the other night found her car skidding across a lawn and through flower beds to come to rest against the side of a house.

Occupants rushed outside to see what had happened and were somewhat floored by the drivers' opening remark as she looked up from one of the mangled flower beds.

"Never did like petunias," she exclaimed.

WASTED EFFORT: A smash and grab thief broke a window at a radio and television store Saturday night and ran off with an item that looked like a radio.

He must have had a surprise when he turned it on.

The item, valued at $65, is no good without it's other half which was left in the window.

Fontana Sisters Feature Leather At Rome's First Fashion Showings

By CHINA ALTMAN

ROME (UPI) — The Fontana sisters of Rome opened the 1961 fashion year by making everything under the sun in leather.

There were cocktail dresses, at-home ensembles and day-time suits designed in all colors of leather by the imaginative sisters who became the first of the world's major couturiers to show their spring-summer collections.

One of the most unusual of the leather creations was a strapless gold lame dress with a flared skirt. The fitted bodice was embroidered with gold and bronze beads and edged with white chiffon at the top. The dress had a matching, slightly eared jacket, ending about four inches below the waistline.

Another cocktail dress was in sparkling white leather made with a scoop neckline and elongated, fitted waist, with bite skirt ending in two double flounces.

Another show-stopper was a lounging outfit in mint-green leather. This consisted of skin-tight slacks and a matching sleeveless poncho. It was worn with a pale green long-sleeved blouse in silk chiffon.

One casual outfit in a grey-blue color the Contanas christened "Italian blue" was made with a flared leather skirt and matching blazer jacket.

Hem-lines for the collection, most important to be held in Rome this season, remained where they were in 1960.

There was no essentially new line. The sisters concentrated instead on an increased use of black and terra-cotta colors for spring and summer and unusual choices of fabrics.

Nearly all the evening gowns were full-length sheaths, mostly in combinations of white with golden embroidery and beads

Often white roses were worn on top of the head for cocktail dresses and there were several fringed Cleopatra-style hats.

New Name for WA Of United Church

Executive of First United Church Woman's Association was elected and installed by Rev. A. I. Higgins at a joint annual and luncheon meeting recently held in the Fellowship Hall attended by 82 members. In the absence of Mrs. T. Lumsden, president, the meeting was chaired by Mrs. L. R. Hall, first vice-president. Honorary president is Mrs. A. I. Higgins; president, Mrs. T. Lumsden; first vice-president, Mrs. L. R. Hall; second, Mrs. R. Creed; third, Mrs. E. M. Oakley; secretary, Mrs. D. G. Revel; treasurer, Mrs. A. A. Jurens; social convener, Mrs. J. G. Martin.

Rev. S. F. Sears gave the devotional. Mrs. A. H. Sheard, past president, introduced guest speaker Rev. A. I. Higgins, who spoke on the organization under the new title of "The United Church Women," to be implemented in 1962; Mrs. E. M. Oakley thanked Mr. Higgins, and Mrs. J.—F. Muir thanked the social committee and all who helped with the luncheon.

Activities of 1960 included a father and son banquet, two dessert parties, seven hot dinners, Christmas party for junior choir, New Year's Eve dance party, six evening lunches, and the annual bazaar.

Donations were made to board of managers, radio fund, Naramata School, Union College, United Church Home for Girls, B.C. Orphanage, and Deaconess order.

Delegates were sent to Naramata, the Mental Health Association meeting, Young People's Conference, and Presbytery.

Legacy of $2,000 Received by IODE

At the recent Florence Nightingale Chapter, IODE, members were informed of a sum of $2,000 received from the estate of the late Mrs. Ida Mellon, who was a member of the chapter. The money will be used for the chapter's charitable work.

At the meeting, chaired by Mrs. G. C. Baker, Mrs. J. L. Gates was nominated as national councillor and Mrs. Baker, Mrs. T. B. Lumsden and Mrs. Karl Mills were nominated provincial councillors.

Mrs. U. N. Lenfesty reported receipts of approximately $120 from the "imaginary tea" held recently, and $157 from the Christmas cheer raffle. Mrs. N. Turner read a letter of thanks from the chapter's adopted school on Saturna Island. Library books and a calendar were sent to the school. It was announced that application will be made to adopt another school. Mrs. Lenfesty also reported that cards and flowers were sent to sick members.

Mrs. William Blair reported briefly on films, and it was made known that the chapter would be responsible for tea arrangements at the joint IODE Festival at the Club Sirocco in February.

The Chapter's annual meeting will be held Monday, Feb. 13 at 12.30 p.m. at the Pacific Club, under convenership of Mrs. Gates and Mrs. L. H. Tweedie. Mrs. Mills, Mrs. William Herriott and Mrs. T. W. Colley were appointed to the nominations committee.

An executive meeting for reading of reports will be held at the home of Mrs. Baker, 3325 Rolston Crescent on Jan. 16.

Your Problems

By Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: Are you some kind of a nut or something? What do you mean by telling Broken-Hearted Sophie that her red-bearded boy friend should shave or be barred from her home? Are you suggesting that unless a person conforms he should be cast out of society?

How about A. Lincoln, Georgie B. Shaw, Siggie Freud, Hank Longfellow, Santa Claus, and all those other cool cats? If this nation is going to swing again and face up to its responsibilities we've got to quit bugging the off-beaters. You're out to lunch.—B. G.

Dear B. G.: Far be it from me to bum-rap the off-beaters but there's a difference between Off-beat and Kooksville.

Every one of the bearded gents mentioned made some contribution to society. They didn't sport chin bushes merely to attract attention. They were men of achievement who wore beards because it was the style of the day.

The kid I told to take a shave was a 17-year-old oddball who was trying to shock people into noticing him. The Smith Brothers at least invented cough drops. This beatnik did nothing but sit around the house and antagonize Sophie's father. The advice stands.

Dear Ann Landers: Please tell me what to do about a good friend who blew her top over something unimportant.

The other evening my husband and I and our two boys (7 and 10) were invited to Jennie's house for supper.

Jennie has little girls, so she doesn't understand that boys are different. My Tommy spilled a glass of milk on her kitchen floor and naturally I was embarrassed, but it wasn't the end of the world.

I picked up what I thought was a rag and started to clean up the mess. She shrieked, "That's my dish-cloth. Don't you dare use it on the floor." I said, "It looks like a rag to me." She became livid and replied, "Maybe my dish-cloths look like rags, but my children know how to behave when they're out."

I shook all evening—didn't enjoy the supper one bit, and neither did my husband. I don't want to go there for supper ever again. My husband says to forget it. What is your advice?—STILL SHAKING.

Dear Still: Go without your children—if you're invited. It's obvious that Jennie is not emotionally tooled up for little boys.

To learn the knack of feeling comfortable with the opposite sex, send for ANN LANDERS' booklet, "How To Be Date Bait," enclosing with your request 25 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

(Ann Landers will be glad to run with your problem. Send it to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

50 Years Married

Last Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Lefevre, 836 Hampshire Road, celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary. A profusion of cards and flowers were received by the couple, who were honored guests at a surprise party arranged by friends. Mr. and Mrs. Lefevre were married 1911, in Vancouver, and came to live in Victoria immediately after their marriage. They have been residents of Victoria ever since. Their only son, Cedric, of La Jolla, Calif., unable to attend the celebration, telephoned his good wishes on Sunday.

Back to England

Mr. J. H. E. Gilbert of Middleton-on-Sea, Sussex, left last week to return to his home in England after spending Christmas on Vancouver Island with his two sons and their families. It is 12 years since his eldest son, Richard, and his father last met in London. Phil, his second son, now lives at Alberni and it is seven years since he last saw his father, so this Christmas was the occasion of a wonderful re-union with his family and relations. The Christmas decorations and lighting on the outsides of the houses were a surprise and delight to Mr. Gilbert. His holiday here was made even happier by the wonderful friendliness of the people, who had shown him such kindliness wherever he had been. Mr. Gilbert has visited factories, furniture stores, hospitals and schools in B.C. and received special welcomes from the Rotary Clubs of Victoria, Alberni and Vancouver and also from local philatelists. He left by train from Vancouver for San Francisco on Jan. 9 and then flew across the U.S.A., stopping en route at Chicago, Akron, Washington and New York. While in New York he is to be the guest at a dinner to be given by the Board of Directors of the Collectors' Club. On Jan. 20 he sails on the Queen Elizabeth for England where his youngest son, Donald, is studying science at Cambridge University.

Victorians enjoying a holiday at the Halekulani Hotel on Waikiki Beach in true Hawaiian spirit are Miss Gladys Pearcy and Miss Isabelle Allan, both of 1182 Old Esquimalt Road. Miss Pearcy is the principal of St. Paul's School in Esquimalt, which was started with nine children in 1955 and now has an enrolment of 95. Miss Pearcy came to Victoria six years ago from Devonshire, England. This is Miss Allan's third vacation in Hawaii.—(Walt's Photo Service.)

Church Guild Treasurer Reports $1,085 on Hand

The annual meeting and election of officers of The Women's Guild of the Church of St. David's-by-the-Sea, was held in the Guild rooms, Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. A. Taylor reported that sympathy, congratulation and "get well" cards, were sent to numerous parishioners during the past year. Mrs. J. H. Mitchell, secretary, reported an active year, in which ten regular meetings, two card parties, a garden tea and Christmas bazaar were held.

Mrs. A. P. Williams, treasurer showed in her report that the guild started the year with $108.00 on hand and that a further $650.00 was raised.

Mrs. S. Morgan Hobbs, vice-president, and Mrs. K. M. Lewis, president, gave brief summaries of the work of the group throughout the past year.

The Rev. H. Gordon Walker, vicar of the parish, presided for the election of officers. Mrs. Walker was elected honorary president; Mrs. Lewis was re-elected president; Mrs. T. Anderson, vice-president, Mrs. Mitchell, secretary and Mrs. Williams, treasurer.

The Guild agreed to finance the remodelling of the kitchen. Mrs. Hobbs and Mrs. W. Ronald to be on the committee in charge of the project. The Guild will serve refreshments, at the annual vestry meeting to be held Monday, January 16.

Tea was served by Mrs. J. Wyper, Mrs. Ronald, Mrs. D. McKay and Mrs. J. B. Minchin. The next meeting of the Guild will be held at the home of Mrs. C. B. Peterson, 995, Gloria Place, Feb. 14.

JUBILEE

The annual meeting of the Women's Auxiliary to the Royal Jubilee Hospital will be held Wednesday, Jan. 25 at 2 p.m. in the Nurses' Home on Richmond Avenue.

VON Auxiliary Raised $1,500

The annual meeting of the Auxiliary to the Victorian Order of Nurses was held at Spencer House recently. Executives returned to office were Mrs. G. A. Jones, president; Mrs. J. L. Campbell, 1st vice-president; Mrs. E. F. Hagarty, 2nd vice-president; Mrs. D. Fish, treasurer and Mrs. E. A. Popham, secretary. Mrs. R. H. Jorgensen is the newly appointed corresponding secretary.

Mrs. Jones reported that during the past year $1,500 had been raised by Auxiliary projects. These included two fashion shows, sale of Christmas cards and novelties and the VON fair in June. Plans were made for the annual dance in February. Mrs. A. G. Chalmers was appointed convenor for the next VON fair to be held at Willows Park in the late spring.

Guests for the evening included Mrs. W. Findlay, president of the Board of Management of the VON, Miss Elizabeth Riddell, District Director, Victoria branch, and associate members of the Auxiliary. Miss Riddell gave a short talk on the recent activities of the nurses and specifically told of the progress being made by the referral system recently instituted at the two hospitals.

Magazines For Adopted IODE School

The regular meeting of the Major John Hebden Gillespie Chapter, IODE, was held at the Mount Joy Avenue home of Mrs. J. B. Speck with the regent, Mrs. V. A. Downard, presiding.

A special guest, Mrs. Doris Valiant, formerly of the Prince Arthur Chapter in Port Arthur, was welcomed.

Mrs. J. A. Pollard, Mrs. J. D. Horne and Mrs. H. C. Molyneaux conducted the nominations of officers. The sum of $2 was donated to the Eskimo Fund. Education secretary, Mrs. J. B. Mackwood reported that two subscriptions, The Children's Newspaper and The Children's Digest, were sent to the Aleza Lake School. Mrs. C. R. Stein gave a report on the food hamper and gifts of clothing and toys given to a needy family at Christmas.

TV TALK

Like it or loathe it, The Untouchables has been picked as the top network television program in North America.

The show also won the "best dramatic program" title in the one-hour division, too. Voting was by the newspaper television editors.

For the ninth time Perry Como and Dinah Shore were chosen as the top vocalists and Como also won the title of "best performer" and his show was picked as the best popular music program.

"Isn't that commercial awfully loud?"

Red Skelton beat out Bob Hope and Jack Benny as best comedian, and Carol Burnett scored over Lucille Ball and Ann Sothern as best comedienne. Other winners:

Variety program, The Ed Sullivan Show. Best use of color, Dinah Shore Show. Half-hour dramatic show, Twilight Zone. Most promising new stars, Bob Newhart, Annie Farge. Most unique new program, The Flintstones. Western series, Wagon Train. Comedy team, Mike Nichols and Elaine May. Mystery program, Alfred Hitchcock Presents. Comedy show, Red Skelton.

Sportscaster, Mel Allen. Country music show, Jubilee U.S.A. Audience participation show, The Price Is Right. Panel show, What's My Line. Best MC, Garry Moore. Daytime program, Today. Announcer, Hugh Downs. Children's program, Captain Kangaroo. News commentator, David Brinkley. Commercial, Piel's Beer.

Winning Contract

By HOWARD SCHENKEN and RICHARD L. FREY

A fertile imagination is supposedly the father of invention. The shrewd and experienced defender will sometimes create entries where none actually exist, and the hornswoggled declarer is left with two alternatives: to give credit graciously, or blame fate and a conspiracy for his downfall.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 N.T.	Pass	3 N.T.	All Pass

Opening lead ◇ 7

North had no good bid but to raise to game in no-trump. There was no likelihood of a slam, and a three-club takeout would amount to a mere wasted motion and might even stop a favorable short suit lead.

Declarer's problem was to establish clubs before the defense could mobilize its diamonds. South won with North's diamond king and led a low club from the board, playing the queen. Quick as lightning, West ducked. On the next club lead, West played the ten and declarer played low on the board, hoping to drop the now-blank ace from East. The latter, however, took the jack and led his last diamonds. Then, when West won the club ace, three high diamonds set the contract.

True, South could have made the hand with ease by simply going up with dummy's king. But would you have, dear reader, under the same circumstances? Let's see what happens if West takes the first club. Declarer wins the diamond continuation, comes to his hand and leads a low club, ducking to East's jack. No more diamonds, no more tricks, until South has made his contract with one overtrick.

$2475 DOWN OR LESS IF DESIRED 4366 PARKSIDE MONTCLAIRE PARK ARCHITECT'S CONTEMPORARY DESIGN

Never before in Canada has a comparable architect designed home been offered on a large sewered lot at this price, down payment and terms. This home can only be described in the terms such as exclusive, distinctive, unusual, luxurious. It has features that you find only in architect's more expensive custom-designed homes. The result of a leading architect's years of training, education, experience and ability. These are some of the things only he is qualified to do so well. Design the entire house so that the exterior is appealing using setbacks, panelling, woods with attractive finishes, etc. Colours which are co-ordinated by their repetition throughout the house and to emphasize the important features of the house. Design the house so that the rooms can be furnished properly and attractively. No room too small — no room with waste space. The work areas are functional—no extra mileage required. Lots of cabinets (just about double the standard) a serving bar for the dining room, built-in G.E. oven and range. A dining room that's large enough for table and chairs, china cabinet, serving area. A living room where you can LIVE — furniture placed for relaxation—an attractive, specially-designed fireplace. Bedrooms that will accommodate twin beds with good-sized closets. A large, easy-to-keep-clean bathroom — with ceramic tile floors and splash around the tub and a large vanity. This is the design. The construction is the absolute finest by Victoria's best contractor, Vickery Construction—Better built with better materials at a lower cost—a written guarantee. You truly live on a millionaire's estate—140 acres of natural park, play areas, boulevards, beach nearby, and your home landscaped for you. In the preferred Gordon Head area but NOT in the new high tax Gordon Head sewer area. Think of this—a new world of living in your home of the 60's for $98.50 per month (P & I) NHA. Taxes $246.00.

Big Marina Resort Planned for Pender

BEDWELL HARBOR, South Pender Island — Work has started on a big new development at Bedwell Harbor.

A group of business men has set up Bedwell Harbor Enterprises Ltd., and will construct a hotel, cottages, marina and other facilities for yachtsmen and other tourists at the port of entry at Bedwell Harbor. D. N. Roberts, W. J. Rumpel and Al Schmidt, of Victoria, B. A. Trump of Kelowna and George Novak of South Pender are the leaders in the undertaking, and crews are already at work preparing the ground. Sheds have been built to house workmen and equipment.

The lodge, facing the sea, will have 16 bedrooms, a full dining room and coffee shop. Eventually another 16 rooms will be added. Twelve cottages will be constructed now, and more next year. A terrace will slope to a large heated swimming pool. The marina, with seaplane floats and a full service department, will cater to craft of all kinds, as well as dispense aviation fuel.

Plans are also in the offing to build a fleet of cabin cruisers for charter in the Gulf Islands, the San Juans and points north.

Two Prince George men, Don Nachtegaele and Wally Kunkel, are construction bosses on the job, and eight men are now at work on the premises.

George Novak, who took over the Bedwell Harbor store from Ed Pritchard two years ago, saw the possibilities of an extended business with the opening of the customs port that same year. Business has exceeded all expectations, and this year the port will remain open five months instead of four, with the starting date set for May 1.

LONG AWAITED

Power, long awaited by South Pender residents, has come closer to reality. J. H. Teece of South Pender, who heads the local electrical committee, has been informed by B.C. Hydro officials that lines will be staked out this week. The minimum of 20 potential subscribers has been exceeded, and local residents have agreed to supply power poles and slash right-of-ways. Instead of a bond, subscribers will be required to deposit six months' minimum, set at $10.70, in advance. Work will start immediately, and it is hoped to have power turned on by early summer.

An upswing in the sale of subdivision lots is expected with the coming of power, and the South Pender of yesteryear is making way for an increase in population undreamed-of when the pioneers sank their roots.

Arena Bylaw Set

Esquimalt council last night started setting up a commission to manage the $400,000 sports arena under construction.

Councillors gave first three readings to a bylaw calling for a five-man commission made up of three councillors and two private citizens appointed by council. Commissioners will serve a two-year no-pay term.

Bylaw calls for a policy report to council every six months and restricts capital expenditures to $5,000 a year. Additional money for capital expense items must be approved by council.

Revenue will be reviewed quarterly. Profits will be turned in to the municipality and in turn credited toward the capital indebtedness of the sports centre.

In other Esquimalt news, B.C. Agricultural Association officials will attend the next council session to discuss financial assistance for the association's proposed new fair and exhibition.

A three-year-old girl who suffered serious head injuries at her West Coast home last week was still in critical condition at Royal Jubilee Hospital last night.

Hospital officials reported the condition of Leslie Hill, daughter of logger Bruce Hill of Long Beach, unchanged during the weekend. RCMP investigation is continuing.

There were no injuries and damage was light when two cars collided at Blanshard and Caledonia last night.

Police said a car driven by Milton Leem, 669 Burnside, was in collision with a car driven by Stanley Shaw, 1240 Glyn Road.

A free showing of films will be held in the Victoria Public Library music room at 3 p.m. Wednesday.

Fisherman's Body Found

NANAIMO—The body of 46-year-old fisherman Clarence Cardinal was found yesterday in Nanaimo harbor, a short distance from his fishing boat.

Mr. Cardinal disappeared about 1 a.m. Thursday.

Dragging began yesterday and the body was found near Farmers Landing, near the Bastion in the heart of the business district.

An inquest will be held.

Campbell River

Story of Death In Road Crash Told at Inquest

CAMPBELL RIVER — The story of how an oil truck's brakes failed causing it to sideswipe a car and swing broadside into the path of a panel truck was unfolded here Monday at an inquest into the death of the panel truck's driver, Nicholas Eftoda.

The accident occurred late Friday afternoon near Big Rock, south of Campbell River.

TWO CONSTABLES

Two RCMP constables, Steve Vatamaniuk and George Ripley, who came on the scene almost immediately after the smash, told the inquest the panel truck appeared to have been travelling at normal speed.

J. L. Puttonen, driver of the sideswiped car, said he had signalled a left turn, and was passed on the right by another car, then struck a glancing blow by the oil truck.

Peter Beyer, who drove the oil truck, said he hit the brakes when he saw Mr. Puttonen's car, but the brakes didn't hold and he slid across the road, into a power pole.

He was thrown out of the cab when the panel truck hit his vehicle, and suffered side and leg injuries.

Mr. Eftoda died of a broken neck, an autopsy report showed. His passenger, Fred Baker, suffered a broken jaw and a broken leg.

Garage proprietor Ken Forde, who serviced the oil truck, said it was a new vehicle and examination of the brakes after the crash showed nothing wrong with them. However, he said, a small piece of grit could interfere with them—"Anything can happen to them at any time."

Protests Renewed

Storm Starts Storm

Water damage during the weekend renewed a storm of protest from Langford Lake residents about a drainage ditch which doesn't work.

Residents will submit an 80-name petition to the deputy minister of highways calling for cleaning of the ditch to prevent further flooding of lakefront properties.

Lake level rose about eight inches between Friday morning and Sunday evening.

One resident said his septic tank stopped working Sunday and that his 11-room home will be flooded if water rises another 2½ feet.

Alex Turner, Trans-Canada Highway, said recently he has no objection if residents want improvement on the drainage ditch which runs across his property from the lake to Goldstream.

Powerhouse Shut Down

B.C. Electric powerhouse at Jordan River, which supplies 20 per cent of Greater Victoria's electricity, may be out of operation until tomorrow because of a landslide.

Jewish 'Promise'

Secret Shaw Play?

LONDON (Reuters)—A British socialist said Sunday George Bernard Shaw wrote a play claiming Britain's foreign secretary in the First World War offered Palestine as a Jewish homeland in return for "a chemical microbe to be used in the war for killing Germans."

ZION CHARTER

Fenner Brockway, a member of the Labor party, said the late playwright wrote the three-act play in disputing socialist views on the reasons for issuance of the 1917 Balfour Declaration.

The declaration, by Foreign Secretary Arthur Balfour, has been hailed by Zionists as their charter.

Brockway said the Independent Labor Party, which had broken away from the Labor party, took the view that "the British, in promising Palestine as a homeland for the Jews, were really hoping, not only to get a mandate over it, but to use it as an imperialist base in the Middle East."

"Shaw said this was all nonsense. He sent me this three-act play in which he says that Balfour gave Dr. Weitzman Palestine in return for a chemical microbe to be used in the war for killing Germans."

Dr. Chaim Weitzman, a scientist, became Israel's first president after the republic was proclaimed May 14, 1948.

Brockway said he now is negotiating with publishers for the play to be published in the fall.

VMD Bid Lowest On Ferry Cafe Job

In the near future B.C. government ferries will be taken off the mainland run one at a time so that restaurant accommodation aboard can be enlarged.

The move to meet increased travel this summer appeared imminent yesterday as tenders for the job were opened.

Low bidder, both on price and time which the ships would remain out of service, was Victoria Machinery Depot, which built Mv Sidney. VMD's low bid of $280,772 stipulated only four days work involving each ship.

There were three bids for the job which will involve building completely new dining facilities on the upper passenger decks of the Sidney and sistership Mv Tsawwassen.

Others were from Yarrows Ltd., Victoria, $301,580; and Burrard Dry Dock Ltd., Vancouver, $339,242.

Negroes Back Campus Quiet

ATHENS, Ga. (UPI) — Two Negro students whose presence on the University of Georgia campus caused a riot last week returned for classes Monday under federal court orders.

There were no untoward incidents to mark their return and the school administration took strict measures to make sure things stayed that way.

Japan Fights Bans To Stay Ahead As Fishing Leader

TOKYO (Reuters) — Japanese fishermen, their traditional skill reinforced by modern equipment, are searching the seven seas for new fishing grounds to maintain their position as the world's leading producer of marine products.

Barred from some of their principal fishing grounds in neighboring waters, they have extended their activities and projects all over the world.

Many Japanese fishing boats now operate in the Atlantic and the Mediterranean to supply fish to European countries.

Fishing bases are being set up or planned in Southeast Asia, Central and South America, the Middle East, and elsewhere, under joint ventures to apply Japanese techniques to local resources.

OTHER AREAS

Japanese government survey ships are being sent to the central Pacific, west African waters and many other areas.

In the Antarctic whaling stakes, the Japanese expedition has improved steadily and increased in size.

Fishing catches by Japanese in 1959, excluding whales, totalled 5,884,659 tons, by far the largest among the world's fishing nations and a record for Japan. This was 36 per cent higher than the prewar record.

Exports of marine products in the same year reached a value of $234,000,000. This made Japan the largest exporter in value of fish, although Norway led in tonnage exported.

These results were achieved despite the fact Japanese fishermen have been kept out of extensive areas off the coasts of Korea and the Chinese mainland as well as the salmon fishing grounds in the Sea of Okhotsk.

Restrictions also have been placed on Japanese fishing in the northern Pacific under the Japanese-Soviet fisheries pact and the Japan-Canada-United States fisheries treaty.

Justice Frozen

NOTTINGHAM, England (UPI)—Justice ground to a halt in Nottingham yesterday. The judge, five clerks of court, the prosecutor and a senior official were in bed with the flu.

Fake Airmen Steal Gold

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Four hold-up men, disguised as airline employees, escaped with gold bullion worth $750,000 Sunday night in a daring robbery at the international airport in suburban Ezeiza.

The armed robbers, wearing coveralls with the emblem of Panagra Airlines, suddenly appeared at the customs office where the gold bricks were being checked. They overpowered the office head and four employees, then tied and gagged them.

Communist China will purchase between 300,000 and 400,000 tons of rice from Burma in 1961.

Santa Bring a Plant?

By M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

Flowers in the house can be a great joy at this season of the year. I hope Santa Claus brought at least one flowering houseplant to your home but, if he slipped up on this, there is no need to get along without the charm of living flowers. A careful search around the garden will be almost sure to turn up the odd plant which can be potted up and brought indoors to provide some color.

Among the crocuses, snowdrops and snowflakes, it is often possible to find a few precocious individuals which are in bud and on the point of blooming. These may be lifted carefully with a hand trowel, set into a shallow pottery bowl and the surface covered with fresh green forest moss to provide a grand centrepiece for the dinner table. After the plants have served their purpose, it is an easy matter to return them to their proper place in the garden.

Primula Wanda is another little charmer which lends itself to this sort of treatment, and doesn't seem to suffer the least harm from its stay indoors during the flowering period. Wanda isn't for the dinner table though, for the lovely deep purple of the petals becomes a rather unpleasant magenta shade when viewed under the yellow rays of artificial light.

Did you ever try cutting out a square of periwinkle—Vinca minor—with a sharp spade and bringing it indoors in a bowl or ornamental shallow dish? In the warmth of the house this subject will burst into bloom within a week and provide a welcome breath of spring in the darkest days of winter. Branches of japonica, forsythia and flowering cherry can be cut, too, and will soon cover themselves with bloom if arranged in vases of water and held at room temperature.

Lily of the valley can be forced indoors also. Dig up a clump of roots, shake off the soil and separate them. Select only the ones with nice plump growing points for potting up — the younger plants with sharp, pointed "pips" or growth buds are too young and immature for forcing. Clean up your selected plants, then trim the roots to about three inches in length, for you won't have room for longer roots in your pots of soil.

A wonderful stimulant for these lily of the valley roots is to soak them in lukewarm water for half a day. A temperature of 100 degrees is ideal — the warmth should be just barely perceptible to the hands — and this temperature can be maintained during the soaking period by standing the bowl on a warm radiator or on top of the TV or radio set. Don't use the kitchen range, even at its lowest setting—one of my neighbors simmered the daylights out of her roots, then wondered why they wouldn't grow.

After their four-hour warm bath, the roots can be potted up. I like to blot mine first with absorbent paper towels so the root hairs don't cling together and can be spread out in the soil. A five-inch pot will take six roots nicely, five around the edge and one in the middle. The purchased all-purpose potting soil is good or you can use a mixture of equal parts loam, peat and sand. Plant with the fibrous roots fairly deep and well spread out, but with the white "pips" only just barely covered.

Keep in a cool, dark place until growth commences, then grow on in a sunny window at ordinary room temperature.

What's Wrong With Words?

It is my feeling language is vanishing. Have you been listening to the radio lately? It's full of Dinah Shore singing "I Ain't Down Yet" from "The Unsinkable Molly Brown" and "I Ain't Down Yet" are virtually the only words in that song. Miss Shore and a chorus just sing noises—very pretty noises but nevertheless nothing resembling English or any other language.

Is this a trend? There is an album out recorded by Peter Palmer which there are no words. Mr. Palmer sings a whole lot of old standards on this album like "Side by Side" but he has replaced the words—those old things—with oh ah do dee dee da and like that. Why no words? "Side by Side" won't ring down the ages as the greatest lyric since "Drink to Me Only with Thine Eyes," but it's a good singable lyric.

There are three or four groups who specialize in this wordless singing—the Swe-Danes (they're Swedes and Danes, foolish), the Double Six of Paris, and Lambert, Hendricks and Ross. They've turned out some pretty good records, too, especially the Swe-Danes. But, as a guy with a vested interest in language—I rather deplore this reversion to animalic grunts. Even when the voice is charming, the amount of expression, or degree of thought and idea, that you can get into, say, dum, or even dah, is pretty limited.

As the Gibbons of Tin Pan Alley, I put this down in my notebook as the first noticeable trend since the question-and-answer or sequel-type songs. You remember the brief flurry of songs which spawned sequels. A boy would sing a song called "Are You Lonesome Tonight?" A few weeks later a girl would sing a different song called "Yes, I'm Lonesome Tonight?"

This ultimately flowered into the most prolonged and heartbreaking telephone conversation since Luise Rainer played Anna Held in "The Great Ziegfeld." This consisted of a couple of songs. In the first one, entitled "He'll Have to Go," a fellow telephones a girl and tells her to get rid of the chump in the living room because he's coming right over. In the second song, which followed a week or so later, called "He'll Have to Stay," the girl tells the guy at the other end, she's going to hang on to the fellow in her living room—presumably forever.

I called my authority in the music game and he said that this outburst of non-language has not yet reached flood tide in the popular music dodge. In short, it's not yet a trend. He said soothingly that the threat would probably pass and that language would emerge unscathed.

The only comforting thing about the winning design for the proposed Franklin D. Roosevelt Memorial in Washington—a series of perpendicular slabs, all massive, vari-shaped, and meaningless—is that it will probably never be built.

All I could think, looking at a picture of these enormous slabs, is that we have progressed not at all past the Druids who left almost the same sort of mementoes behind them. Reaction among architects here ranges from total indifference to icy disdain—if there's any enthusiasm, I haven't heard it—but the interesting thing is that some of the most avant garde architects are most outspoken against the winning design.

But there are no funds to build the darned thing and when it gets to the Appropriations Committee, I'm sure that will be the last we'll hear of it.

HOLLYWOOD (NANA)—Jimmy Stewart can have the lead in Otto Preminger's movie version of "Advise and Consent"—to play the top Democrat. And Jimmy, as you may know, is a fervent Republican. "I'd like to do it," Jimmy told me, "if I can fit it into my schedule." Which includes a Hitchcock thriller—"I don't know what it is about or where it takes place. It's such a secret Hitch isn't even letting me see the script." And "Mr. Hobbs Takes a Vacation" for 20th-Fox.

The award for the canniest trade of the week goes to Leland Hayward who got Frank Sinatra for his television special, "The Gershwin Years" in exchange for closing "Gypsy" for one night so that Ethel Merman could sing at the inauguration gala in Washington Friday. Closing "Gypsy" for one night costs about $10,000. Sinatra's smallest TV fee is $50,000 but Frankie wanted Merman and that was that.

Unless Sinatra has persuaded rat pack member Judy Garland to stay over to sing for John Kennedy and the Democratic party, she should be back in London after flying 9,000 miles for one cavalcade of stars appearance at the Deauville Hotel in Miami. Per price of $10,000 will be five times that amount for her TV appearance in the fall on CBS.

I promised Eli Wallach, for whom I have an unrequited passion, that I would see his new play, "Rhinoceros," having told him I saw it in London with Sir Laurence Olivier and didn't like it. When Sir Larry plays mousy little men he fails to thrill me. Not only was Eli a big improvement in the part but, except for the people turning into rhinoceroses—or is it rhinoceri?—it was hardly the same play. In London the satire was serious. On Broadway, the message was wrapped in broad farce. I much preferred the New York version. And would like to see it as a movie.

Kennedy Will Spend

Tax Cut Likely

First Problem: Stop the Recession

Huge Deficit Abroad Next on U.S. Agenda

This is the second of a series of articles on the plans and problems of the new Kennedy administration.

By FRANK CORMIER

WASHINGTON (AP)—As a presidential candidate, John F. Kennedy urged a faster-growing economy. As the president, his first problem will be to make it grow.

FOURTH SETBACK

The economy hasn't been growing at all since mid-1960. It has slipped into its fourth recession since the Second World War. Most forecasters see little hope of an upturn before spring or summer.

Kennedy is expected to unveil an anti-recession program soon after he is inaugurated.

HEAVY DEFICIT

The second major economic problem Kennedy will inherit is the whopping deficit in the U.S. balance of international payments.

With Americans and their government paying out more money abroad than they receive, foreigners are collecting extra dollars with which they can buy American gold. The payments deficit approached $4,000,000,000 in 1960 and gold sales to foreigners hit $1,900,000,000.

DOLLAR'S FUTURE

The problem is causing foreign anxiety about the future of the dollar. A sour dollar would obviously wreck Kennedy plans for enhancing U.S. prestige, not to speak of other effects.

Kennedy will give first priority to the recession. He is expected to prime the economic pump, probably through an acceleration in defence spending and road building, stimulation of housing and expanded unemployment benefits.

President Eisenhower has called for a balanced budget in the coming fiscal year, and Kennedy has declared himself generally in favor of that objective, too. But should emergency government action become necessary, economists believe Kennedy will not hesitate to propose them—including deficit spending measures.

Should the recession get severe enough, Kennedy might even ask congress for a temporary tax cut to give the public more spending money.

SOME RISKS

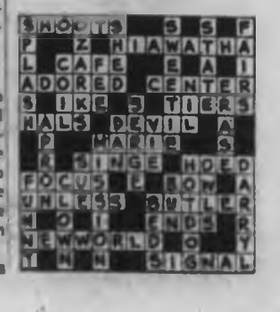

Kennedy may be willing to take a few risks with the gold situation because of his avowed determination to promote a dynamic economy able to afford broader social welfare programs. This goal will have equal rank with his foreign policy objects.

President Eisenhower has attacked the payments deficit by curbing federal spending abroad, calling for reducing the number of military dependents overseas, promoting exports and urging more help from other nations in financing the free world's defences and development.

Kennedy may make some modifications but won't undo the whole package unless there is a significant reduction in the gold drain.

Thousands Uneasily Watch Sky

No More Rain Please Flooded Duncan Plea

Weary Work Crews Repairing Damage

DUNCAN — A housewife surveyed her sodden living room and wept.

Her husband inspected the home's foundations, where fast flood waters had sucked away the soil, and he felt like crying, too.

Over wide areas of Duncan yesterday, it was a typical scene as murky waters receded from the roads and yards, and thousands uneasily watched the sky and prayed for no more rain.

SHORED UP BRIDGES

While weary crews filled in washed-out roads and shored up shaken bridges, the 70-odd families whose homes were flooded a little or a lot took stock of their own damage.

There was silt to mop up, warped floors to be levelled or relaid, split doors to fix, wallpaper to be hung, wrenched porches to rebuild, soggy furniture to dry out. Over all hung the mixed odor of dirt and damp.

For Duncan, this is the year of the big flood—the worst it has ever seen. And, if city council can carry out the plans it began shaping last night, the last it will see.

WASHED OUT

Duncan's damage toll included two bridges washed out and the water system polluted when rising water swamped the intake and pumphouse. A sound truck toured the city, blaring its warning to boil all water.

Schools were closed yesterday, "for health and safety reasons" but were to reopen today with students bringing their own beverages.

There were no confirmed serious casualties. Police were checking a report that a man and canoe vanished in the rampaging Cowichan River. Hospital treatment was needed for Mrs. Margaret Joseph, of Koksilah, who suffered shock after being rescued from her flooded home.

STILL HAD WATER

At press time, at least 12 of about 30 evacuated homes in the Wall subdivision still had water in them.

Only emergency operations were being performed in King's Daughters' Hospital.

The Cowichan River dropped an estimated three feet yesterday, but flood water was still pouring over low land at Cowichan Bay and some homes in the southeastern corner of the city were still flooded.

Maple Bay is still cut off from Duncan by water on Lakes and Tzouhalem Roads.

WASHED OUT

A bridge on Cowichan Lake Road near the tennis club had pilings knocked from under it and 10 feet of one approach washed out. Water was six feet over the bridge.

Up to this gap, unawares, rolled a bread truck driven by John Tcheslog. He saw the washout too late to stop, and tried to jump it. The truck nearly made it. Damage was about $100.

Duncan council last night heard a charge that the flooding could have been largely prevented if the federal government had kept the main channel of the Cowichan clear.

Ald. Steve Saunders' charge moved Mayor Jack Dobson to remark: "We hope that after what has happened we can strike while the iron is hot" to have the channel cleared.

AMEND CODE

Council also passed a resolution to amend the building code and fix levels above which floors must be built.

The mayor and aldermen praised all who fought the floods.

The villain of the piece was rain: 2.35 inches Saturday, 1.35 inches Sunday, falling on earth saturated by heavy downpours the previous week. Instead of sinking into the ground, the fresh rain ran off on the surface, cutting gullies, building into freshets, raising rivulets into creeks, creeks into rivers and rivers into torrents.

Where the rivers meet the sea, unusually high tides backed them up and sent the water out across the land.

High tides this morning posed a new threat of flooding, if any more rain fell.

But last night the stars were shining.

15 Inches in 72 Hours Not Rainfall Record!

Heaviest Vancouver Island rainfall during the weekend was in the Jordan River area, weatherman William Mackie said yesterday.

He said 15 inches of rain had fallen in the Jordan River watershed during a 72-hour period ending yesterday morning.

Although rainfall was heavy, it was not a record for that area. He said about 13 inches of rain was recorded there in a single day some years ago.

Torrential Rains

Nanaimo District Mopping Up Today

NANAIMO — Central Vancouver Island continued mopping up operations today after torrential weekend rains caused damage estimated at hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Nanaimo River was on the rampage as flood waters burst its banks and inundated thousands of acres of farm and bush land.

The floods were the worst in the district's memory.

Hardest hit was the Cedar district, five miles west of here, where roads were washed out, bridges threated and at least 11 families left homeless.

High tides Sunday combined with a stiff southeast breeze to cause water to back up from the river's mouth in Nanaimo harbor. Seven families were marooned when their homes were not flooded.

A threat of inundation of the Trans-Canada Highway near the river diminished as the tide went out but highways department emergency crews kept a round-the-clock vigil.

Hundreds of homes throughout the Nanaimo district had flooded basements and crews were working overtime in an effort to keep ditches cleared that are being dug for the new sewerage system.

Alberni Flooding

Weary Refugees Begin Back-Breaking Clean-Up

Typical scene in soggy Alberni Sunday morning was this one—with Lloyd Kolstad carrying his daughter from their home on Margaret Street as Kitsuksis Creek rose rapidly. An hour later the water began dropping about a foot an hour.—(Photo by Margaret Trebett.)

ALBERNI—Weary refugees evacuated from the flooded homes here Sunday went back yesterday to begin back-breaking clean-up jobs and make a heartbreaking assessment of damage.

Works superintendent Robert Waugh said there was no way of estimating the number of families evacuated, nor actual damage figures.

But there was a terrific amount of damage to homes and furnishings, he said last night.

Homes were flooded along Somass River and Kitsuksis Creek, where water spilled over sodden banks Sunday after 36 hours of rain.

High tides and wind slowed the escape of water into the inlet, contributing to the flooding.

The Salvation Army hall and All Saints' Anglican Church hall were thrown open to refugees but the facilities were not needed. Most of the refugees went to stay with relatives or friends either in Alberni or Port Alberni.

Statistics Tell Tragic Story Of Welfare

By PETER BRUTON

The true, tragic story behind the ever-mounting criticism of B.C.'s welfare services lies buried in a mass of uninteresting looking government reports, statistical tables and statements published during the past few years.

Basically it's a story of wildly - mushrooming caseloads and a reduction in the number of staff handling the work.

Miss Ruby McKay, who sparked the present controversy when she resigned in protest after 16 years as B.C. superintendent of child welfare, charged that it was impossible for her staff to cope with the rapidly increasing number of families and children who needed help.

Annual reports of the social welfare department explain in detail just how heavy the load has become.

In 1954 the average case-load—the actual number of welfare cases handled by each social worker—rose from 235 to 251. At Dec. 31, 1959, the case-load had reached the staggering figure of 337.

Welfare experts say the ideal case-load is between 50 and 60.

In 1956 the department employed 556 workers — clerical, professional and technical—including 20 in the office of the superintendent of child welfare.

1,894 Children

The number of children being cared for totalled 1,894.

In 1959, the last year for which statistics are available, the number of employees had been cut by five—to 551—including 18, or two less, in the child welfare branch.

The number of children on the rolls totalled 3,337 — or double the case-load of 1956.

In her annual report for 1959, under the heading of "Strengthened Preventative Services Needed," Miss McKay wrote:

"The superintendent of child welfare and the three children's aid societies begin the new fiscal year (April 1, 1960) with responsibility for 4,815 children—343 more than have ever been in agency care in this province."

But even these figures do not give the whole picture. The situation is even worse.

In 1957, 10 of the 19 employees in the child welfare branch were trained social workers. By 1959, two years later, the number of such skilled employees had dwindled to six.

How much more serious the situation is today will not be known for at least 12 months as the department, along with most other government departments, does not release its annual report for the year ending March 31 until the legislature sits the following January.

Situation Worse

But Miss McKay's resignation points to the fact that the situation has deteriorated even further.

An examination of the annual reports and answers to questions tabled in the provincial legislature shows that when Social Credit came to power in 1952 some 70 per cent of social workers had university training, the remainder having taken a departmental "in-training" course.

Seven years later, at Dec. 31, 1959, the ratio had been completely reversed. Of the 211 social workers in the welfare department, 129, or better than 60 per cent, had no university training for the job.

And, excluding departmental

Parliament Hears 'Watchdog' Report

OTTAWA (CP)—The case of the RCAF officer's $34,950 house that finally cost $79,631 was put before Parliament yesterday by Auditor-General Maxwell Henderson.

It was one of 44 irregularities in government financial operations singled out by Mr. Henderson in his first annual report as Parliament's watchdog of the public purse.

GOOD ORDER

His report, tabled in the Commons together with public accounts for the 1959-60 fiscal year ended last March 31, found the books in good order on the whole. He said the public service has a long tradition of "scrupulous care and honesty of purpose" and its performance should not be condemned simply because of instances of waste or lack of judgment.

Then he proceeded to discuss what he had found, and near the top of the list was the house built for an unidentified senior RCAF officer.

APPROVED JOB

The government's treasury board approved the job at $25,000 for the house and $9,950 for utilities and landscaping. RCAF records showed the building cost $56,716 and utilities and landscaping $22,915.

The air force, he said, had figured the original estimate without counting the cost of service labor and materials. Cash outlays were within the approved limits.

FISHING FINES

Another case was that of a former magistrate who hadn't paid over some $2,400 he collected in fines for fisheries act offences from 1956 to 1958. The magistrate paid up when taken to court.

Some other instances reported by Mr. Henderson:

● Six Asian countries receiving commodity shipments as aid from Canada under the Colombo Plan had not yet reported on the creation of "counterpart funds" to match these donations — totalling $85,601,000 in the years 1954 to 1960.

● A navy deserter, absent for more than a year, was severely hurt in a car crash. The navy paid $3,500 in hospital and medical expenses before discharging him, and a further $8,000 expense was anticipated.

● The works department did $4,281 in dredging work for a private company at Liverpool, N.S., without charging the company.

● A Montreal firm—not identified—did a $245,415 job for the transport department in repairing ice-damaged landing craft at Frobisher Bay, on Baffin Island, before the treasury board's approval was sought.

● The government paid $631,000 to help Nova Scotia collieries with excess coal stockpiles.

● A contract for airport development at Riviere-du-Loup, Que., had to be boosted to $725,000 from $479,965 after a new runway layout was chosen which led over a large, deep area of muskeg.

● Two naval officers, posted from Ottawa for six weeks' duty at Centralia, Ont., spent most of the time in Ottawa and collected $539 in allowances for time spent at their Ottawa homes.

Rebels Ready To Talk

PARIS (UPI)—The Algerian Moslem rebel regime announced yesterday it is ready to open negotiations with the French toward a peaceful settlement of the Algerian war. Informed French sources said President Charles de Gaulle might agree to such talks.

The rebel "provisional government" announced its offer in Tunis at the end of a week-long meeting to consider the results of the referendum in which de Gaulle won solid endorsement for his "Algerian Algeria" policy.

The rebel leaders said they were prepared to negotiate with the French government on conditions for a new referendum in which the Algerian people would decide between complete independence, or semi-independence and continued close links with France.

Firm's 'Private Paradise' Bars Vital Island Road

By ALEC MERRIMAN

Action of the Elk River Timber Company in keeping the Gold River road to the west coast of Vancouver Island barred to the general public "is making the government and the people look stupid," Comox Socred MLA Dan Campbell charged last night.

He charged that even the game warden has a difficult time getting into the area.

RIDICULOUS

"It is absolutely ridiculous when a government official can't get in, far less the public," Mr. Campbell said.

The 51-mile road from Campbell River to Muchalat Arm was built and is controlled by the Elk River Company at the eastern end and the Tahsis Company at the western end. Part of the road runs through British Columbia's Strathcona Park, but public access is barred, except by a Coach Lines bus service. Then passengers are forbidden to smoke, no matter what season it is.

The Colonist learned yesterday that when one game warden made a surprise check in the area last year, he found four company officials fishing in one of the area

'Keep Hands Off Laos'

OTTAWA (UPI)—External Affairs Minister Howard Green yesterday told the big powers to "keep their hands off" the strife-torn nation of Laos.

He said outside intervention in the current conflict would "imperil not only the sovereignty of that country but peace and stability in all of southeast Asia."

Green's warning, contained in a lengthy statement to the Commons, appeared aimed at both the United States and the Communist powers.

"This is actually the question which the big powers have to settle," Green said, referring to international agreement on the identity of the legitimate Laotian government.

"If they do not agree to some settlement, in any event if they do not keep their hands off," Green said, "it is quite impossible for other countries to bring about a settlement."

'Hitler Man to the End' SS General Tells Court

NUREMBERG (Reuters) — A former SS general told a court trying him on a charge of manslaughter Monday he is a "Hitler man right to the end."

The ex-general, Erich Von dem Bach-Zelewski, said that even today he is convinced of Hitler's innocence.

During interrogation, Bach-Zelewski claimed to have given Hermann Goering the poison which enabled him to escape the gallows in 1946.

The former Nazi Luftwaffe chief took cyanide in his cell Oct. 15, 1946, a few hours before he was to be hanged for war crimes.

Pier Burns Six Missing

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP)—A pier at the U.S. naval base here was heavily damaged by fire Monday, and the navy said six men were unaccounted for when the fire was brought under control.

At least six other men were injured.

U.S. May Buy More Planes

WASHINGTON (CP)—The United States Army is negotiating for the purchase of 36 more Canadian-made Caribou troop transport aircraft, Canadian informants said Monday.

$3,500,000,000 Interest Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has borrowed money to pay the interest on the interest on the interest, W. H. McMillan (L—Welland) complained Monday night.

That's been going on for three years, ever since the 1957 conversion loan involving outstanding Victory Loan Bonds, he told the Commons in the budget debate.

Extra interest resulting from the loan amounted to some $60,000,000.

That extra high interest would have to be paid for a generation or more, mounting perhaps to $3,500,000,000 or more than twice the cost of the First World War.

Traditional Tiger Hunt for Queen Brings Growls from Animal Lovers

LONDON (CP) — The Queen's proposed tiger shoot in India—the regal recreation of bygone imperial days — appears to be generating growing growls of protest.

The six-week Asian tour by the Queen and Prince Philip, which begins Friday, includes a two-day tiger-hunting expedition at a maharajah's lodge. Despite protests, Buckingham Palace spokesman say there is as yet no indication of a cancellation.

What irritates the critics is the method of the hunt. Buffalo calves or goats are tethered to a post close to tiger-proof shelters in which the hunters wait for their prey. When the tiger appears and begins tearing up the tied animal, he is shot. When the hunt is held at night, bright lights are sometimes used to blind the tiger.

"How low can the human race sink?" asks a letter writer in the Daily Mirror.

The League Against Cruel Sports has written Prime Minister Nehru of India asking him not to allow "the wicked cruelty of this barbarous affair which would not have been tolerated in Britain."

The league says "the Queen has become so associated with cruel blood sports that it has come to be thought that the only fitting sort of entertainment for her is one in which she can kill something or see something killed."

Columnist John Deane Potter of the Sunday Dispatch urges the Queen to change her mind about the tiger shoot.

He says the sport is as exciting as "going to Regent's Park zoo, poking a rifle through the bars and killing a caged tiger."

Kingsley Martin of the weekly New Statesman says "nothing will be quite so certain to evoke satirical comments in the Indian press."

A public meeting in New Delhi yesterday protested against the tiger hunt.

The Ahimsak non-violence Party, a non-political group which opposes animal slaughter passed a resolution urging the Queen to call it off.

Indian officials said the program will not be changed, despite the protests.

Arnie's Birdie Beats Balding After Big Comeback Effort

Arnold Palmer shot a birdie three on a sudden-death playoff hole Sunday to beat out Toronto's Al Balding for top money of $2,800 in the $20,000 San Diego Open golf tournament.

Balding, who went into the final round tied with Vancouver's Stan Leonard and Eric Monti of Los Angeles for the lead, shot a five-under-par 66 on the last 18, but the remarkable Palmer was one stroke better to force the playoff. Included in the comeback was a 40-foot putt for an eagle three.

Both had finished the 72 regulation holes 13 under par at 271. Leonard soared to a 73 and wound up in a tie for ninth place. He won $710 compared to $1,900 for Balding. Monti wound up tied for 17th place with a 75.

Gary Player of South Africa took third money with 275, good for $1,400.

Last night's scores: Navy 13, Army 5; Pattersons 6, IAA 4.

Chicago has Glenn Hall, Pattersons have George Hall, and everybody's happy except the opposition.

George was the difference for Pattersons again last night, making 30 saves as the Pats edged Independent Athletic Association, 6-4, in a Commercial Hockey League game before a crowd of about 1,000 at Memorial Arena.

He was about as tough to beat as his National Hockey League namesake, and was particularly brilliant in the third period, when he stopped two breakaways with his club ahead, 5-4.

Toby Wilson had got IAA off to a 2-0 lead with a pair of goals in the first period. Pattersons came back with three, two by Bob Jones and one by Bob Fowler. Gary Barlow tied it up for IAA, but Fowler made it 4-3 at 18.20 of the second period.

TWO BIG SAVES

Arnold Elliott broke the game open at 7.40 of the third period going the length of the ice to fire a hard shot for the winning goal. Then Hill made his two big saves, and Orv Coulter got the insurance goal.

In the first game, Navy whipped a shorthanded Army club, 13-5. The Soldiers, with some of their best players on flood duty, dressed only 10 men.

John Morris had four goals and two assists for Navy. Emil Chobater and Ron Cook each scored a hat trick, and Cliff Uhren, Johnny Bond and Bernie Webber added singles. Joe Thir, Larry Meyers, Pat McNeill, Whitey Ashworth and Cliff Noonan replied for Army.

West Indies In Good Spot

SYDNEY, Australia (Reuters)—The West Indies built up a lead of 316 runs by the close of play in the third cricket Test Match with Australia Monday and moved into a strong position to square the five-match series.

The West Indians had Australia all out for 202 runs and then scored 179 by the close of play with three second-innings wickets still standing. The West Indies scored 339 in their first innings.

The first match in the test series ended in a tie and Australia won the second contest.

Half Way Captures Ninth Cage Victory

Half Way House made it nine victories in 10 starts in the Senior "B" Men's Basketball League last night, downing second-place Kings Hotel, 55-48, to open up a nine-point lead.

George Denison was high scorer for Half Way with 14 points and Ken McCulloch turned in 14 for Kings.

Victoria University moved into a second-place tie in the Senior "B" Women's League, beating Dockettes, 26-18. It was the Dockettes' sixth straight loss.

In the closest game of the night, Victoria University took a three-point lead in the first half and made it stand up for a 25-22 win over Chinese Students in the Junior Men's League.

Confusion Still Keynote In James-Dorohoy Deal

What with a three-game losing streak and a game here against Edmonton Flyers tonight, Victoria Cougar coach George Agar has enough troubles without getting involved again in the Eddie Dorohoy-Gerry James mess.

But a report from Winnipeg claiming James is ready to sign with Winnipeg Warriors and that Eddie Dorohoy will join the Cougars had Agar up in arms last night.

"I wish," he said carefully, "That those so-and-sos in Winnipeg would stop telling everybody that Eddie Dorohoy is going to play with us. How can they know that when I don't even know it myself?"

For those who may have missed the odd installment, the James-Dorohoy saga goes something like this:

Toronto Maple Leafs, who own James' contract gave Cougars rights to negotiate with him. Cougars tried mightily, but James wouldn't say yes or no. James lives in Winnipeg and Warriors want him, so they offered Cougars rights to Eddie Dorohoy in exchange for rights to James. Cougars said yes, Toronto said no, and James said maybe.

Now comes word from Winnipeg that Leafs have changed their mind, that James will be signed in time for Wednesday's Western Hockey League game against Vancouver, and that Dorohoy will play for Cougars.

A FEW DETAILS

Meanwhile, back at the Arena, Agar was pointing out a few minor details:

Dorohoy is still recovering from a broken leg, and may not even be ready this season. He is still under suspension by Winnipeg for not reporting to Winnipeg when his contract was sold, and can't play for anybody until this is straightened out.

Even if he is ready, and the suspension lifted, Cougars would still have to meet Dorohoy's price, and Silent Ed has never been one to sell his services cheaply.

THIS SEASON ONLY

"Besides," Agar summed up, "the James-Dorohoy deal is for this season only. We'd look pretty darn stupid paying him a fancy price, finding out we couldn't use him, then giving him back to Winnipeg next season.

"Dorohoy's leg was X-rayed by our own doctor yesterday. Until we get a report, nothing can be done, no matter what they say in Winnipeg."

The conversation switched to Cougars, their 6-4 loss to the Buckaroos in Portland Sunday, and their prospects against the Flyers tonight.

"We played better Sunday," Agar said. "I think they'll be hitting harder against Edmonton."

Agar added he and Flyer coach Bud Poile may be talking trade after the game. Flyers have lost 11 of their last 12 and Cougars are in rough shape too, so a deal could be made tonight.

Cougars led twice Sunday, and were pressing for the tying goal late in the third period. But when Agar lifted goalie Marcel Pelletier for an extra forward, Art Jones scored on the empty net.

All Cougar scoring was done by the Ford-Goyer-Saunders line. Bill Saunders scored twice, his 14th and 15th goals of the season; Goyer added his 19th, and Ford his 11th. Jones had two goals for Portland, and Arnie Schmautz, Pat Ginnell, Ron Matthews and Bill McCulley got the others.

AT THE 19th

With Harry Young

Sitting around on Sunday waiting for the rain to stop—which it didn't—this golfer sat thinking about the changes that have taken place in the game since he started playing it over 40 years ago.

Obviously of course, there were no such appurtenances as caddy carts or electric carts. No one had yet hit upon the idea of a peg tee to take the place of the sand mound, although I remember someone having a little round rubber cup which he found useful to elevate the ball when the sand provided was too dry, or even non-existent.

There were no steel shafts and top players spent a lifetime looking around for perfect pieces of hickory for their clubs. Clubs were not numbered. The woods were the driver, brassie, spoon or baffy, in that order of strength while the irons were cleek, driving iron, midiron, lofted iron, mashie, and niblick.

Some daring St. Andreans carried a jigger—not a 19th hole measure—among their iron clubs as well to play the long run up shots so popular at the home of golf. The putter could be either wood or metal.

Golf balls were even more numerous and varied than they are today. The gutty was just about dead, and the new rubber-cored balls were made in several sizes. Floaters were an oversize version of the modern ball and, as their name indicates, they were useful on courses with water hazards—they did not sink.

Irons were not made of stainless steel, and one of the duties of every (good) caddie was to polish up the player's rusty irons with a piece of emery paper after every round. Some caddies kept rubbing away at the irons as the play proceeded. Eventually of course the rubbing had its effect and the clubs became "light headed."

I think it was J. H. Taylor, although it could have been Jim Braid who told me he never had his irons polished, "because in sunshine the reflection off the polished metal could dazzle you."

Of all the innovations which have gone to make golf a much easier game than it used to be I suppose the steel-shafted club must be given first place. The ball springs off the modern club and goes a fair distance even if it has not been perfectly hit, in sharp contrast to what happened with the old wooden shafts that demanded a flawless execution if good results were to follow.

The ball too has improved, but not to the degree clubs have done.

For the pros at least, I suppose the greatest innovation of the past 20 years has been the development of the pitching and sand wedges. These are the tools the pros use to roll three shots into two from positions within 100 yards of the pin.

Yet although there have been all these changes in equipment the game remains singularly unchanged. There is only one major difference, apart from penalties and interpretations of the rules, that I can remember from 40 years ago.

That came from the abolition of the stymie. The Americans cut out this putting green hazard many years before the R. and A. finally unbent, and relinquished a feature of match-play golf that many people thought to be unfair and out of line with the general concept of the game.

Many of our present-day players may never have played the stymie rule, and some younger ones may never have heard of it.

Anyway, in a two-ball match an opponent's ball blocking the way to the hole could not be lifted unless the two balls were within six inches of one another—most score cards doubled as stymie measures—and the player further away from the hole had to exert his ingenuity by either rounding the obstructing ball with a shot that had "side" on it or by lofting over it into the hole with a niblick or other lofted implement.

Stymies were not always accidental. The player putting first always had it in mind to place his shot to a position that "might" cause an obstruction to his opponent.

In other words he would attempt to be in the hole, or past it, if the other ball was being putted in the opposite direction, or if both balls were being putted from the same angle, he would prefer to be short so that the chance of an obstruction to his opponent might be created.

I don't think I would like to see a return of the stymie, but one of these days I would like to play a friendly singles match using the old rule just for "auld lang syne."

But apart from that golf is still golf, and the changes though many and complicated are confined to such technicalities as provisional balls, unplayable lies, hazard penalties and moving balls on the green and the elimination of the penalty for hitting the flagstick.

Even those all-weather giants of the buttons thought discretion the better part of valor Sunday when it was decided to postpone the match between holders George Bigelow and Laurie Carroll and challengers Laurie Kerr and George Andrews.

The match was to have been played at Gorge, and there wasn't much option left to the players for the tenth hole was virtually a lake as a result of the non-stop 24 hours rainfall.

The game will be played this Sunday at the same course, weather permitting, and so will the junior buttons replay between Al MacLeod and Dick Freeman, the holders, and Dick Munn and Bill Hodson, the challengers.

ALBERNI — Alberni Athletics moved into third place in the Inter-City Basketball League Sunday, defeating Vancouver Harlem Nocturnes 96-79 in a game that resembled a football contest.

Three players required medical treatment during the wild second half.

The most seriously injured player, Paul Winn of Vancouver, was struck in the throat by an elbow. A doctor had to restore his breathing before the game continued.

Two Alberni players were injured. Bob Radies required four stitches for a head cut and Gary Panton needed two stitches over his left eye. Both were hit by elbows during tussles for the ball.

Don Krego of Alberni was thrown out by the referee after he threw the ball at the official following a call.

Vancouver Surge Nips Warriors, 4-3

Vancouver Canucks, who can handle anybody on the prairies but Calgary, saved all their scoring for the third period last night and edged Winnipeg Warriors, 4-3, to move back into a first-place tie with Stamps in the Western Hockey League.

It was the third win in five starts on the prairie tour for Canucks. Both defeats were at the hands of the Stamps, and both came at times when Canucks could have had the lead or a share of it with a victory.

Last night's score: Vancouver 4 at Winnipeg 3. Sunday: VICTORIA 4 at Portland 6, Spokane 1 at Seattle 2.

Next game: tonight Edmonton at VICTORIA.

Warriors, looking like anything but a last-place club in recent games, got off to a 2-0 lead on goals by Gord Redahl and Gord Labossiere before Canucks finally broke loose.

Bruce Carmichael scored his 16th goal for Canucks at 8.20 of the third period, and was back to score again at the 12-minute mark to tie it up.

Orland Kurtenbach put Canucks ahead at 13.47, slapping in a rebound. The scrappy Warriors came back to tie again as Labossiere, who had set up Winnipeg's first goal, scored his second of the night. But that was to be all, as Canucks kept up the pressure and finally got the winner from Dave Duke on a three-man rush with less than five minutes remaining.

Sunday at Seattle, veteran Rudy Filion took over the WHL scoring leadership, assisting on Bill MacFarland's two goals as the Totems edged Spokane Comets, 2-1. Del Topoll scored for Spokane.

Filion, who collected seven points last week, now has a total of 56, two more than Ron Leopold of Calgary.

FAN FARE By Walt Ditzen

Fan Injured By Comets

SEATTLE (AP)—An assault in which a Seattle hockey fan was beaten into unconsciousness after Sunday night's Seattle-Spokane game brought threats, charges and counter-charges Monday.

The felled fan, Bill Carr, 36, was in hospital with a brain concussion and bruises. His wife, Elsa, said charges would be filed against the Spokane players she contended were responsible for the attack.

Bad feeling between the two clubs was heightened by the trouble, which broke out near the stairway to the Spokane dressing room.

Roy McBride, coach and general manager of the visiting Comets, said his team would not return to Seattle "without proper police protection around our dressing room; this is the worst town in the league."

Keith Allen, Seattle coach and general manager, called the Spokane players "bush" and said they provoked trouble because they were "sore over losing 2-1."

FORMAL PROTEST

The Seattle president, Marv Burke, said he would file a formal protest with the Western Hockey League over the conduct of the Comets. He called it "detrimental to the sport."

The flareup is the second between the two teams in a fortnight. Frank Arnett, Seattle player, was suspended for six games for striking an official after he was penalized for a mixup on the ice with Spokane's Forbes Kennedy.

SPOKE NASTILY

Spokane forward Colin Kilburn said Sunday night's trouble came after he had been struck by a thrown object and then Carr spoke nastily to him.

When informed that the Carrs were considering a suit, McBride stated that the Comets would back the players "to the hilt."

"If we're sued, we'll sue the Seattle Hockey Club in return for failing to provide us adequate police protection to and from the dressing room as provided under league rules," McBride said.

HE BLED

"Kilburn was hit on the back of the head by an object thrown by a fan. The skin was broken and he bled. No player should have to stand for anything like that.

"After a hard, tough game in Seattle, our players have to stand for both verbal and physical abuse from the fans who hurry from their seats so they can spit, swear and throw things at them."

Unitas, Van Brocklin Stars of Pro Bowl

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Johnny Unitas, barely stealing the show from the retiring Norm Van Brocklin, hit Lennie Moore on two long and decisive pass plays Sunday as the West defeated the East 35-31 in the Pro Bowl.

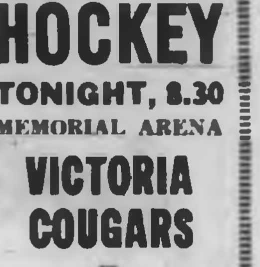

Unitas, voted the top player of this annual National Football League all-star event for the second straight year, passed for 218 yards and helped set up the West's final touchdown with a 25-yard run.

Unitas threw one 44-yard scoring pass to Moore, his Baltimore teammate, and hit him again on a 66-yarder that put the West in position for another touchdown.

But Van Brocklin, who quarterbacked Philadelphia to the 1960 NHL championship, hardly finished his 11-year pro career in disgrace.

The Dutchman, who has said repeatedly this would be his last game, tied a bowl record by pitching three touchdown passes. Altogether, Van Brocklin threw for 288 yards, completing 17 of 38. Unitas hit on 10 of 18.

Jim Taylor, Green Bay's driving fullback, set a bowl record by scoring three touchdowns, all on runs of two yards or less.

Spilling, Boiling, Angry Floods Spread Havoc

More Rain Due

Dripping City Drying Out

The weekend weather's fury left Greater Victoria and surrounding areas with flooded homes and roads, road washouts, large trees strewn across roads, shortage of fresh water and plugged storm drains.

Homes in Happy Valley, Luxton and Langford were flooded.

Public works officials and homeowners alike breathed a sigh of relief when it finally stopped raining Sunday afternoon.

NEXT BARRAGE

Weatherman William Mackie, expecting the next barrage of a series of Pacific storms to hit overnight and today, said it will be windy, but may not be as wet.

In Greater Victoria Sunday, municipal works crews answered 100 complaints in Saanich, 39 in the city, a dozen in Esquimalt and four in Oak Bay.

Most of the complaints were of flooded basements, many caused by non-existent or inadequate home connection to nearby drainage systems.

WITHIN INCH

When water came within one inch of entering the home of W. H. Lang, Luxton Road, Mrs. Lang took her Sunday roast to a neighbor's house, the family jacked up their furniture and evacuated at 3 p.m.

Homes on Brock Road, Langford, were surrounded by flood water as an adjacent ditch overflowed during the storm.

Goldstream Park on the Trans-Canada Highway became a roaring, angry river, swirling around picnic tables in the camping area.

WATER CUT OFF

Water was cut off for half a day from 75 per cent of the homes in Sooke Sunday when Lannon Creek ground through its bank near Saseenos, washing away a section of the Sooke Highway and Sooke's water main.

The entire section disappeared as biting water ate a hole 40 feet long and 15 feet deep. Highways department work crews converted a nearby logging road into an overnight detour.

Water service was restored Sunday to Sooke, apart from two homes serviced by a spur line, which were without water until noon yesterday.

SAME AREA

In the same general area:

A shoulder of the West Coast Road was washed out by torrential Mink Creek, beyond Point No Point resort.

Flooded Sooke River deposited piles of logs on the uninhabited upper portion of Sooke River Road. Loggers will clear the logs.

Dewdney Flats on the Victoria-Sooke highway, was covered by four feet of water and cars were diverted on nearby old Sooke Road.

Strong winds following the rain toppled several trees on East Sooke Road, which were chopped up into blocks by power saws and rolled off the road.

East Sooke Road had two feet of water near the Becher Bay junction, causing some cars to stall.

COUPLE OF FEET

Sooke Road near Kangaroo Road intersection was under a couple feet of water.

Happy Valley Road was flooded but cars were able to get through.

Patricia Bay airport had 3.97 inches in a 48-hour period ending at 4 a.m. Monday, he said.

Victoria had 2.25 inches during the weekend, bringing January's total so far just above five inches. The record is 13.28 inches, in 1935.

Hundreds of Loggers Flooded Out of Work

Hundreds of men employed in the rain-soaked forests of Vancouver Island lost a day's work Monday and many stand to lose more time.

Torrential weekend rains forced closure of MacMillan and Bloedel camps at Nanaimo Lakes, Copper Canyon and Northwest Bay. Only one of the three was expected to reopen today.

B.C. Forest Products mill at Youbou, which had been operating on reduced shifts for some time, was closed until further notice as result of the floods, a spokesman said.

In the Port Alberni region, all camps and mills were reported open Monday but officials said emergency crews worked through Sunday repairing washed-out sections of the Franklin River road.

Flooding of roads in the Harmac area made it necessary for workers to travel by a roundabout route to the pulp mill at Cedar.

Huge Tank On Loose

QUALICUM — Small boat operators in the Qualicum Beach area were warned yesterday to watch for a floating 500-gallon gasoline tank uprooted by flood waters from Wilson's boathouse. RCMP said the buried tank was dug out by mounting water and swept out to sea sometime Sunday.

Owners of the boathouse are holidaying away from the Island.

Amateur Pruners Courting Summons

Victorians who take it on themselves to prune city-owned trees without authority could be prosecuted, members of city council park committee observed yesterday.

The warning came after one resident protested against being billed $10 for "correction" of his pruning attempts.

"He went out and butchered the trees," said parks administrator W. H. Warren. "We cut off the stubs and billed him."

Police Ask Hike Of $9.51 Month

Parity with salaries paid in Vancouver is the basic objective of Victoria police union in forthcoming wage negotiations with city police commission.

Union representatives appeared before the commission yesterday to outline contract clauses which they would like reopened this year.

FIRST CLASS

Wage parity with Vancouver, it was pointed out, would mean an increase of about $9.51 per month for a first-class constable in Victoria, now receiving $456.49 a month.

A first-class constable in Vancouver receives $466 a month.

Union also asked to have its group insurance plan withdrawn from the contract. Union members explained the union is carrying this policy on its own, having already paid off the city in full for its past participation.

OTHER CLAUSES

Other clauses to be reopened concern internal department matters.

Commission also received the police department's preliminary budget for the coming year. Amount involved is $709,000, and is still subject to "pruning."

Included here is a request by Chief Const. John Blackstock for addition of six men to the present strength of 95 officers and men, one policewoman and two matrons.

Boys in Hut As Searchers Comb Forest

CAMPBELL RIVER — Two boys missing Sunday at Camp One, MacMillan and Bloedel, turned up safe Monday morning after a night in a fire suppression cabin.

Danny Kirby and Norman Morton set out about noon Sunday with one fishing rod, and darkness overtook them in the woods.

While RCMP, loggers and Search and Rescue—about 50 men in all—combed the forest, the boys sheltered in the cabin, and walked out when morning came.

COOMBS — January could have a record rainfall if it continues as it has so far this month, according to the records of R. H. Holbech, district weather observer at Coombs. Up to Saturday morning, Mr. Holbech recorded 9.15 inches of rain, and it was still raining. A total of 2.38 inches of precipitation was recorded in one 12-hour period on Jan. 4.

Temperatures have been unusually high, with 53 degrees recorded on Jan. 7. Lowest so far this month was 28 degrees.

Trees and shrubs are showing well-advanced buds, and pansies, violets, primroses and snowdrops are blooming in some gardens.

Board Awaiting Action by B.C.

A delay of at least two months in the scheduled March vote on new school construction for Greater Victoria was announced last night by school board chairman W. C. Gelling.

Uncertainty over exactly which recommendations contained in the recent Chant report will be implemented by the government prompted the delay, he said.

"We daren't go ahead as planned now," said Mr. Gelling. "It wouldn't be fair to either the public or the school board."

SECRET MEETING

Mr. Gelling said following a secret committee meeting at which trustees discussed the issue, it was decided "the whole thing should be deferred at least until we have some definite information on what changes might be implemented."

This should be available by April 1, he said, giving the board time to complete its planning for submission of the bylaw by the latter part of May or early June.

"We want to have this bylaw vote completed before the summer holidays get under way," Mr. Gelling said.

BE IN TROUBLE

Officials reported last night that local schools will be able to cope with the expected influx of new pupils this September, regardless of the delay, but "we'd really be in trouble if there was no additional accommodation by September, 1962," the chairman said.

NO DECISIONS

In anticipation of the changes recommended in the Chant report, the school board did not make any final decisions in planning for a new three-year building program.

Biggest headache for planners will be the decision on whether Grade 7—one of the fastest-growing sections of the local school population — remains in junior high or becomes part of elementary schools as recommended by the Chant royal commission.

"I don't think the delay will cause any harm," said Mr. Gelling. "Probably as a result of waiting a couple of months we will have better planning. We'll certainly try our darnedest to see that is the case."

Ever-Optimistic Guest Rises from the Ashes

Peter Bruton's Capital Notebook

GUESTWARD HO! The way I hear it, Vancouver lawyer Gowan Guest is still determined to win the Conservative nomination for the Esquimalt-Saanich byelection.

Mr. Guest, it may be remembered, wrote letters to Conservatives and people he thought were Conservatives asking them if they would reply giving their views on the suitability of his being a candidate.

The views of a number of people who replied must have shocked Mr. Guest, recently retired as Prime Minister John Diefenbaker's executive assistant.

Anyway, the advent of Mr. Guest upon the local scene brought cries of "carpet-bagger" and the Liberals, who had been in a low ebb since they ran a very poor third some 15,000 votes off the pace in the 1958 election, immediately began to get optimistic.

Mr. Guest, who was going to settle in Saanich and open a law office here, disappeared from the scene shortly afterwards and apparently went back to his old law firm in Vancouver.

But now he has risen from the ashes, so to speak, and is even sending us speeches he has made castigating the Liberals.

The one thing that will help Mr. Guest win the nomination on Feb. 17 is if a large number of candidates seek the honor and thus split the vote.

Apparently there's talk in the area of a judgeship here and an appointment to a federal body there, but after all this can have nothing to do with Mr. Guest who, even if he wanted to, is not in a position to reward the faithful.

BRIEF ENCOUNTER: "Is the government going to order any sort of inquiry into its welfare services?" we quickly asked Premier Bennett as he rushed into cabinet yesterday.

"You're looking healthy aren't you?" shot back the premier as he slid through the door.

End of interview.

Big Marina Resort Planned for Pender

BEDWELL HARBOR, South Pender Island — Work has started on a big new development at Bedwell Harbor.

A group of business men has set up Bedwell Harbor Enterprises Ltd., and will construct a hotel, cottages, marina and other facilities for yachtsmen and other tourists at the port of entry at Bedwell Harbor. D. N. Roberts, W. J. Rumpel and Al Schmidt, of Victoria, B. A. Trump of Kelowna and George Novak of South Pender are the leaders in the undertaking, and crews are already at work preparing the ground. Sheds have been built to house workmen and equipment.

The lodge, facing the sea, will have 16 bedrooms, a full dining room and coffee shop. Eventually another 16 rooms will be added. Twelve cottages will be constructed now, and more next year. A terrace will slope to a large heated swimming pool. The marina, with seaplane floats and a full service department, will cater to craft of all kinds, as well as dispense aviation fuel.

Plans are also in the offing to build a fleet of cabin cruisers for charter in the Gulf Islands, the San Juans and points north.

Two Prince George men, Don Nachtegaele and Wally Kunkel, are construction bosses on the job, and eight men are now at work on the premises.

George Novak, who took over the Bedwell Harbor store from Ed Pritchard two years ago, saw the possibilities of an extended business with the opening of the customs port that same year. Business has exceeded all expectations, and this year the port will remain open five months instead of four, with the starting date set for May 1.

LONG AWAITED

Power, long awaited by South Pender residents, has come closer to reality. J. H. Teece of South Pender, who heads the local electrical committee, has been informed by B.C. Hydro officials that lines will be staked out this week. The minimum of 20 potential subscribers has been exceeded, and local residents have agreed to supply power poles and slash right-of-ways. Instead of a bond, subscribers will be required to deposit six months' minimum, set at $10.70, in advance. Work will start immediately, and it is hoped to have power turned on by early summer.

An upswing in the sale of subdivision lots is expected with the coming of power, and the South Pender of yesteryear is making way for an increase in population undreamed-of when the pioneers sank their roots.

Big Program Ready!

$760,000 Allocated To Sewers

COURTENAY — Details of federal government assistance for the city's $760,000 sewer program have been completed.

Mayor W. C. Moore said yesterday a meeting with Central Mortgage and Housing officials had settled the phase of construction eligible for federal loans.

Arrangements for an easement for the main sewer trunk along a former logging railway right-of-way through the city were also given final approval yesterday by Crown Zellerbach of Canada, the mayor said, in lieu of annual taxes of about $600.

Tenders for the two-year construction program will be called early in February, he said.

Exact amount of the government's share of the financing will not be known until later this week, when the city's consulting engineers complete their tally of the approved construction items.

Federal money has been offered the municipality at 3½ per cent interest to stimulate employment. If construction is completed by April, 1963, 25 per cent of the loan will be written off.

Fifty or more jobs will be created by the work for at least 18 months.

CHEAPER RATES

Savings to the city in cheaper interest rates and government write-off of part of the borrowings will be upward of $60,000.

Fisherman's Body Found Near Bastion

NANAIMO — The body of 46-year-old fisherman Clarence Cardinal was found yesterday in Nanaimo harbor, a short distance from his fishing boat.

Mr. Cardinal disappeared about 1 a.m. Thursday.

Dragging began yesterday and the body was found near Farmers Landing, near the Bastion in the heart of the business district.

An inquest will be held.

Story of Death In Road Crash Told at Inquest

CAMPBELL RIVER — The story of how an oil truck's brakes failed causing it to sideswipe a car and swing broadside into the path of a panel truck was unfolded here Monday at an inquest into the death of the panel truck's driver, Nicholas Eftoda.

The accident occurred late Friday afternoon near Big Rock, south of Campbell River.

TWO CONSTABLES

Two RCMP constables, Steve Vatamaniuk and George Ripley, who came on the scene almost immediately after the smash, told the inquest the panel truck appeared to have been travelling at normal speed.

J. L. Puttonen, driver of the sideswiped car, said he had signalled a left turn, and was passed on the right by another car, then struck a glancing blow by the oil truck.

Peter Beyer, who drove the oil truck, said he hit the brakes when he saw Mr. Puttonen's car, but the brakes didn't hold and he slid across the road, into a power pole.

He was thrown out of the cab when the panel truck hit his vehicle, and suffered side and leg injuries.

Mr. Eftoda died of a broken neck, an autopsy report showed. His passenger, Fred Baker, suffered a broken jaw and a broken leg.

Garage proprietor Ken Forde, who serviced the oil truck, said it was a new vehicle and examination of the brakes after the crash showed nothing wrong with them. However, he said, a small piece of grit could interfere with them—"Anything can happen to them at any time."

Nanaimo Jobless

New Money Methods Urged at Conference

NANAIMO — Need for reform of the monetary system or a change in the present methods of money management was suggested by two speakers at an unemployment conference sponsored here by the Nanaimo-Alberni District Labor Council Sunday.

Speakers urged declaration of an emergency and the taking of wartime measures to meet the job problem.

CCF leader Robert Strachan said it is about time that control of credit was taken out of private hands.

John Squire, CCF MLA for Alberni, said an interest-free or low-interest loan system would be a major means of combatting the rising rate of unemployment across Canada.

Nanaimo Ald. Jack Parker said there would be no difficulty in putting all the unemployed in this district to work if the city could obtain loans on that basis.

Jewish 'Promise'

Secret Shaw Play?

LONDON (Reuters)—A British socialist said Sunday George Bernard Shaw wrote a play claiming Britain's foreign secretary in the First World War offered Palestine as a Jewish homeland in return for "a chemical microbe to be used in the war for killing Germans."

ZION CHARTER

Fenner Brockway, a member of the Labor party, said the late playwright wrote the three-act play in disputing socialist views on the reasons for issuance of the 1917 Balfour Declaration.

The declaration, by Foreign Secretary Arthur Balfour, has been hailed by Zionists as their charter.

Brockway said the Independent Labor Party, which had broken away from the Labor party, took the view that "the British, in promising Palestine as a homeland for the Jews, were really hoping, not only to get a mandate over it, but to use it as an imperialist base in the Middle East."

"Shaw said this was all nonsense. He sent me this three-act play in which he says that Balfour gave Dr. Weitzman Palestine in return for a chemical microbe to be used in the war for killing Germans."

Dr. Chaim Weitzman, a scientist, became Israel's first president after the republic was proclaimed May 14, 1948.

Brockway said he now is negotiating with publishers for the play to be published in the fall.

Fake Airmen Steal Gold

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Four hold-up men, disguised as airline employees, escaped with gold bullion worth $750,000 Sunday night in a daring robbery at the international airport in suburban Ezeiza.

The armed robbers, wearing coveralls with the emblem of Panagra Airlines, suddenly appeared at the customs office where the gold bricks were being checked. They overpowered the office head and four employees, then tied and gagged them.

Death Toll May Rise In Toronto Flames

TORONTO (UPI)—At least four persons were killed Monday when fire swept through a downtown hotel and firemen said the toll could climb higher.

Many of the 25 residents of the Carson Hotel leaped into fire nets, slid down ropes and ladders or crept along window ledges to escape the blaze which caused an estimated $400,000 damage.

At least two more persons were trapped on the top floor of the four-storey hotel and firemen said there could be more.

Six guests and four firemen were injured when the roof of the 65-room hotel collapsed.

The hotel was bought last year by Charles Hemstead who suffered a $500,000 loss less than two weeks ago when his Canadian National Exhibition restaurant was destroyed by fire.

Negroes Back Campus Quiet

ATHENS, Ga. (UPI) — Two Negro students whose presence on the University of Georgia campus caused a riot last week returned for classes Monday under federal court orders.

There were no untoward incidents to mark their return and the school administration took strict measures to make sure things stayed that way.

Japan Fights Bans To Stay Ahead As Fishing Leader

TOKYO (Reuters) — Japanese fishermen, their traditional skill reinforced by modern equipment, are searching the seven seas for new fishing grounds to maintain their position as the world's leading producer of marine products.

Barred from some of their principal fishing grounds in neighboring waters, they have extended their activities and projects all over the world.

Many Japanese fishing boats now operate in the Atlantic and the Mediterranean to supply fish to European countries.

Fishing bases are being set up or planned in Southeast Asia, Central and South America, the Middle East, and elsewhere, under joint ventures to apply Japanese techniques to local resources.

OTHER AREAS

Japanese government survey ships are being sent to the central Pacific, west African waters and many other areas.

In the Antarctic whaling spakes, the Japanese expedition has improved steadily and increased in size.

Fishing catches by Japanese in 1959, excluding whales, totalled 5,884,659 tons, by far the largest among the world's fishing nations and a record for Japan. This was 36 per cent higher than the prewar record.

Exports of marine products in the same year reached a value of $234,000,000. This made Japan the largest exporter in value of fish, although Norway led in tonnage exported.

These results were achieved despite the fact Japanese fishermen have been kept out of extensive areas off the coasts of Korea and the Chinese mainland as well as the salmon fishing grounds in the Sea of Okhotsk.

Restrictions also have been placed on Japanese fishing in the northern Pacific under the Japanese-Soviet fisheries pact and the Japan-Canada-United States fisheries treaty.

Algerian Rebels Ready to Talk

TUNIS (Reuters)—Leaders of the six-year revolt against French rule in Algeria said Monday they are ready to begin negotiations with France on conditions for a free vote to determine the future of the North African territory.

Government officials in Paris said the Tunis statement was "under study" and there would be no comment for the time being.

NATION PAID $79,631 FOR OFFICER'S HOME

'Watchdog' Tells MPs

OTTAWA (CP)—The case of the RCAF officer's $34,950 house that finally cost $79,631 was put before Parliament yesterday by Auditor-General Maxwell Henderson.

It was one of 44 irregularities in government financial operations singled out by Mr. Henderson in his first annual report as Parliament's watchdog of the public purse.

GOOD ORDER

His report, tabled in the Commons together with public accounts for the 1959-60 fiscal year ended last March 31, found the books in good order on the whole. He said the public service has a long tradition of "scrupulous care and honesty of purpose" and its performance should not be condemned simply because of instances of waste or lack of judgment.

Then he proceeded to disclose what he had found, and near the top of the list was the house built for an unidentified senior RCAF officer.

APPROVED JOB

The government's treasury board approved the job at $25,000 for the house and $9,950 for utilities and landscaping, but the building cost $56,716 and utilities and landscaping $22,915.

The air force, he said, had figured the original estimate without counting the cost of service labor and materials. Cash outlays were within the approved limits.

FISHING FINES

Another case was that of a former magistrate who hadn't paid over some $2,400 he collected in fines for fisheries act offences from 1956 to 1958. The magistrate paid up when taken to court.

Some other instances reported by Mr. Henderson:

● Six Asian countries receiving commodity shipments as aid from Canada under the Colombo Plan had not yet reported on the creation of "counterpart funds" to match these donations — totalling $85,601,000 in the years 1954 to 1960.

● A navy deserter, absent for more than a year, was severely hurt in a car crash. The navy paid $3,500 in hospital and medical expenses before discharging him, and a further $8,000 expense was anticipated.

● The works department did $4,281 in dredging work for a private company at Liverpool, N.S., without charging the company.

● A Montreal firm—not identified—did a $245,415 job for the transport department in repairing ice-damaged landing craft at Frobisher Bay, on Baffin Island, before the treasury board's approval was sought.

● The government paid $631,000 to help Nova Scotia collieries with excess coal stockpiles.

● A contract for airport development at Riviere-du-Loup, Que., had to be boosted to $725,000 from $479,965 after a new runway layout was chosen which led over a large, deep area of muskeg.

● Two naval officers, posted from Ottawa for six weeks' duty at Centralia, Ont., spent most of the time in Ottawa and collected $539 in allowances for time spent at their Ottawa homes.

Chancellor Konrad Adenauer yesterday agreed to let Economics Minister Ludwig Erhard be named as his successor.

By PETER BRUTON

The true, tragic story behind the ever-mounting criticism of B.C.'s welfare services lies buried in a mass of uninteresting looking government reports, statistical tables and statements published during the past few years.

Basically it's a story of wildly - mushrooming caseloads and a reduction in the number of staff handling the work.

Miss Ruby McKay, who sparked the present controversy when she resigned in protest after 16 years as B.C. superintendent of child welfare, charged that it was impossible for her staff to cope with the rapidly increasing number of families and children who needed help.

Annual reports of the social welfare department explain in detail just how heavy the load has become.

In 1954 the average caseload—the actual number of welfare cases handled by each social worker—rose from 235 to 251. At Dec. 31, 1959, the case-load had reached the staggering figure of 337.

Welfare experts say the ideal case-load is between 50 and 60.

In 1956 the department employed 556 workers — clerical, professional and technical—including 20 in the office of the superintendent of child welfare.

1,894 Children

The number of children being cared for totalled 1,894.

In 1959, the last year for which statistics are available, the number of employees had been cut by five—to 551—including 18, or two less, in the child welfare branch.

The number of children on the rolls totalled 3,337 — or double the case-load of 1956.

In her annual report for 1959, under the heading of "Strengthened Preventative Services Needed," Miss McKay wrote:

"The superintendent of child welfare and the three children's aid societies begin the new fiscal year (April 1, 1959) with responsibility for 4,815 children—343 more than have ever been in agency care in this province."

But even these figures do not give the whole picture. The situation is even worse.

In 1957, 10 of the 19 employees in the child welfare branch were trained social workers. By 1959, two years later, the number of such skilled employees had dwindled to six.

How much more serious the situation is today will not be known for at least 12 months as the department, along with most other government departments, does not release its annual report for the year ending March 31 until the legislature sits the following January.

Situation Worse

But Miss McKay's resignation points to the fact that the situation has deteriorated even further.

An examination of the annual reports and answers to questions tabled in the provincial legislature shows that when Social Credit came to power in 1952 some 70 per cent of social workers had university training, the remainder having taken a departmental "in-training" course.

Seven years later, at Dec. 31, 1959, the ratio had been completely reversed. Of the 211 social workers in the welfare department, 129, or better than 60 per cent, had no university training for the job.

And, excluding departmental

Rampaging Creek Slices Road

Firm's 'Private Paradise' Bars Vital Island Road

By ALEC MERRIMAN

Action of the Elk River Timber Company in keeping the Gold River road to the west coast of Vancouver Island barred to the general public "is making the government and the people look stupid," Comox Socred MLA Dan Campbell charged last night.

He charged that even the game warden has a difficult time getting into the area.

RIDICULOUS

"It is absolutely ridiculous when a government official can't get in, far less the public," Mr. Campbell said.

The 51-mile road from Campbell River to Muchalat Arm was built and is controlled by the Elk River Company at the eastern end and the Tahsis Company at the western end. Part of the road runs through British Columbia's Strathcona Park, but public access is barred, except by a Coach Lines bus service. Then passengers are forbidden to smoke, no matter what season it is.

The Colonist learned yesterday that when one game warden made a surprise check in the area last year, he found four company officials fishing in one of the area

'Keep Hands Off Laos'

OTTAWA (UPI)— External Affairs Minister Howard Green yesterday told the big powers to "keep their hands off" the strife-torn nation of Laos.

He said outside intervention in the current conflict would "imperil not only the sovereignty of that country but peace and stability in all of southeast Asia."

Green's warning, contained in a lengthy statement to the Commons, appeared aimed at both the United States and the Communist powers.

"This is actually the question which the big powers have to settle," Green said, referring to international agreement on the identity of the legitimate Laotian government.

"If they do not agree to some settlement, in any event if they do not keep their hands off," Green said, "it is quite impossible for other countries to bring about a settlement."

'Hitler Man to the End' SS General Tells Court

NUREMBERG (Reuters) — A former SS general told a court trying him on a charge of manslaughter Monday he is a "Hitler man right to the end."

The ex-general, Erich Von dem Bach-Zelewski, said that even today he is convinced of Hitler's innocence.

During interrogation, Bach-Zelewski claimed to have given Hermann Goering the poison which enabled him to escape the gallows in 1946.

The former Nazi Luftwaffe chief took cyanide in his cell Oct. 15, 1946, a few hours before he was to be hanged for war crimes.

Pier Burns Six Missing

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP)— A pier at the U.S. naval base here was heavily damaged by fire Monday, and the navy said six men were unaccounted for when the fire was brought under control.

At least six other men were injured.

Rebels Lose Laos Battle

VANG VIENG (AP) — A Laotian government column, supported by rocket and machine-gun fire from U.S. supplied trainer-fighter planes, fought its way today into this rebel base on the road to the royal capital of Luang Prabang.

$3,500,000,000 Interest Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has borrowed money to pay the interest on the interest on the interest, W. H. McMillan (L—Welland), complained Monday night.

That's been going on for three years, ever since the 1957 conversion loan involving outstanding Victory Loan Bonds, he told the Commons in the budget debate.

Extra interest resulting from the loan amounted to some $60,000,000.

That extra high interest would have to be paid for a generation or more, mounting perhaps to $3,500,000,000 or more than twice the cost of the First World War.

Rebels Ready To Talk

PARIS (UPI)—The Algerian Moslem rebel regime announced yesterday it is ready to open negotiations with the French toward a peaceful settlement of the Algerian war. Informed French sources said President Charles de Gaulle might agree to such talks.

The rebel "provisional government" announced its offer in Tunis at the end of a week-long meeting to consider the results of the referendum in which de Gaulle won solid endorsement for his "Algerian Algeria" policy.

The rebel leaders said they were prepared to negotiate with the French government on conditions for a new referendum in which the Algerian people would decide between complete independence, or semi-independence and continued close links with France.

Traditional Tiger Hunt for Queen Brings Growls from Animal Lovers

LONDON (CP) — The Queen's proposed tiger shoot in India—the regal recreation of bygone imperial days — appears to be generating growing growls of protest.

The six-week Asian tour by the Queen and Prince Philip, which begins Friday, includes a two-day tiger-hunting expedition at a maharajah's lodge. Despite protests, Buckingham Palace spokesman say there is as yet no indication of a cancellation.

What irritates the critics is the method of the hunt. Buffalo calves or goats are tethered to a post close to tiger-proof shelters in which the hunters wait for their prey. When the tiger appears and begins tearing up the tied animal, he is shot. When the hunt is held at night, bright lights are sometimes used to blind the tiger.

"How low can the human race sink?" asks a letter writer in the Daily Mirror.

The League Against Cruel Sports has written Prime Minister Nehru of India asking him not to allow "the wicked cruelty of this barbarous affair which would not have been tolerated in Britain."

The league says "the Queen has become so associated with cruel blood sports that it has come to be thought that the only fitting sort of entertainment for her is one in which she can kill something or see something killed."

Columnist John Deane Potter of the Sunday Dispatch urges the Queen to change her mind about the tiger shoot.

He says the sport is as exciting as "going to Regent's Park zoo, poking a rifle through the bars and killing a caged tiger."

Kingsley Martin of the weekly New Statesman says "nothing will be quite so certain to evoke satirical comments in the Indian press."

A public meeting in New Delhi yesterday protested against the tiger hunt.

The Ahimsak non-violence Party, a non-political group which opposes animal slaughter, passed a resolution urging the Queen to call it off.

Indian officials said the program will not be changed, despite the protests.

U.S. May Buy More Planes

WASHINGTON (CP)—The United States Army is negotiating for the purchase of 34 more Canadian-made Caribou troop transport aircraft, Canadian informants said Monday.
